'Hand-Picked' Charge Disrupts Business Parley

FUR FLIES AS DEBATE OPENS ON U. S. ILLS

Selection of Clevelander as Chairman Causes Row In Packed Chamber.

1,000 ATTEND SESSION

'Little Fellows' In Business Heckle, Shout Demands For Chance to Air Views.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The administration-sponsored conference of small business men got off to an uproarious start today—so uproarious, in fact, that it had to be temporarily suspended soon after it had listened to a message from President Roosevelt pledging sympathetic federal treatment of their economic problems.

Scores of delegates stamped through the spacious commerce auditorium, striving for recognition from the chair, shouting for recognition so loudly that it became impossible to transact business. Chairman Fred Roth of Cleveland suspended the meeting temporarily.

1,000 Pack Chamber.

More than 1,000 representatives of small business firms packed the chamber while the president's message was being read. Disorder quickly followed.

As Assistant Secretary of Commerce Ernest Draper announced that Fred Roth, president of the Whitney-Roth Shoe company, of Cleveland, had been selected temporary chairman, a vocal group loudly clamored for recognition.

Accusations were hurled at the chair that Roth had been "hand picked" by the administration. Shouting above the din, Roth vigorously defended himself against the charge declaring he was a "typical small business man."

After further brief but tumultuous debate, Roth was elected permanent chairman by a standing vote.

Finally Start Debate.

Taking over the gavel, Roth thereupon officially opened the scheduled three-hour debate which had been set aside for consideration of problems confronted by small business.

Uproar was precipitated anew when J. Howard Mitchell, Washington, D. C. hardware man, wrested the microphone on the speaker's dais and sought to deliver an address on purchasing power.

He was immediately drowned out by the yelling delegates.

Bates Uncovers 'Miniature' Slots, Threatens Arrests

Police Chief Meade K. Bates issued a warning today to proprietors who have been displaying small "counter" slot machines which pay from the counter instead of the machine. He said he had confiscated four in the last few days, and warned that from now on proprietors displaying them will be prosecuted.

Chief Bates said the machines were small and could be placed on counters and removed quickly. Most of them, he said, are penny machines, although a few operate with a nickel or dime. They do not "shell out" when a strike is made, but either money or merchandise is paid across the counter by the proprietor.

The chief also warned that distributors of the machines are just as liable to prosecution as store owners who display them.

HUNTED RACKET SUSPECT JAILED

Dixie Davis, Purported Heir to Rich N. Y. Policy Games, Arrested In Pennsy.

(By Associated Press)

PHILADELPHIA — J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, long sought by Prosecutor Thomas E Dewey as a leading heir to the late "Dutch" Schultz' $100,000,000-a-year policy racket in New York City, was arrested in a west side apartment today.

A special squad of Pennsylvania state police and Dewey aides battered down a door of the apartment, rushed in, and seized Davis, who was personal attorney for Schultz, slain gang leader, in Schultz' many scrapes with the law.

Arrested with Davis, now disbarred, were George Weinberg, brother of the claiming Schultz henchman, "Bo" Weinberg, and an actress named Hope Dare, held as a suspicious person. She wore a black wig.

Indictments for Davis, Weinberg, and ten others were obtained last July 14 by Dewey, now New York county district attorney, when he was special rackets prosecutor.

Davis, described by Dewey's staff as the "legal brains" of the Schultz mob, had grown a moustache since his indictment.

Dewey has described Davis as a man from a modest upstate New York hamlet who rose to wealth and power within the realm of crime. He kept three apartments, boasted an expensive wardrobe, engaged an entire floor in a downtown skyscraper as offices, and was a well-known figure in "cafe society."

TIP PAYS OFF

Toledo Number Operators Hit For $150,000 Cash-In.

TOLEDO —(INS)— Numbers game operators here were "taken" to the tune of about $150,000 yesterday, according to reports today.

Police professed ignorance of the matter, and no official comment was available But, according to the reports, the heavy payoff was due to a tip circulated during the day on the stock market number.

The number 915 paid off 500 to one, and so many persons played the number that pay-offs set a new high, it was said.

There are at least six numbers outfits here, and operators of the three largest, although they refused to be quoted, said they would pay off. Three smaller companies were reported on the verge of bankruptcy.

No one knew the source of the tip which proved so costly.

Mayor Tells Council Plan Would Provide Funds to Hire at Least 3 More.

CITES NEED OF MEN

Solution of City Traffic Problem Lies In Larger Force, He Asserts.

Nickel-in-the-slot parking meters as a method of providing revenue for the addition of "at least three more men" was proposed by Mayor Claude M. Hunter as he asked city council last night to create a larger police force.

Reviewing the annual report of Police Chief Meade K. Bates which carried a recommendation for seven additional officers, Hunter said: "This is nothing new. The same appeal has been made for years, but for the safety of the community we need additional officers in the department."

He pointed out that the present force was undermanned and said "serious consideration should be given to the expansion of the department with at least three more men."

Sees Only One Solution.

"We have had numerous experiments in the handling of the ever increasing traffic problem in Mansfield—it is a real problem," the mayor said. "However the solution lies in the need of officers for enforcement

"With the increased traffic congestion caused by our own motorists as well as others who drive here from surrounding communities, it is up to us to provide parking space and additional officers to relieve some of the congestion.

"I am fearfully in accord with the plan of adopting the parking meter. I feel that it will be a source of income to the city and will solve the traffic congestion problem, and I would like to see some consideration given to this mode of handling our parking."

Hunter pointed out that because of the lack of officers in the department, "crimes have been committed that would never have occurred if we had had more policemen."

Praises Police.

He praised the "marvelous work" being done by Police Chief Bates and his men and lauded the cruiser idea in police work

"Speed and radio are valuable assets in combatting modern day crime," he added, "but we need more beat men, and as the city's finances are not bubbling over, I advocate the parking meter as a means of meeting additional expense."

The mayor's appeal followed an explanation by R. C. Cook, director of the parking meter division of the O. D. Jennings company of Chicago, in which he displayed a sample meter and explained its construction and the advisability

Oil Lamps to Light Scene Of Woodville Anniversary

300 In Community Club to Dress In Finery of World War Days as Feature of 20th Observance Friday.

High-buttoned shoes, ankle-length skirts sashed at the side, tight-fitting trousers, high stiff collars and all other accessories in vogue back in 1918 will have their day again when the Woodville Community club meets Friday night.

The club's 300 members will turn back 20 years on that night and meet in surroundings closely likened to that period when about 40 members of the community met at the school to organize the club.

Oil Lamps Come Back.

Kerosene lamps, like those the school used when it was a two-room affair, will take the place of electric lights, as club members, dressed in the finery of the World war period, gather in the school auditorium.

The anniversary program will also include a display of antiques. Teachers, members of the club and pupils of the early days will speak and recall their experiences in the community 20 years ago.

Old time songs with musical accompaniment by an organ and a debate will form a part of the entertainment.

The evening will be concluded with an old-fashioned "poke lunch" and coffee served in tin cups just as the early club members did in their time.

All former pupils and teachers of the school have been invited.

Records in possession of R. K Clark, twice president of the Community club, showed today

FOODS CHEAPER

Grocery Costs Reach Lowest Level In 18 Months.

CHICAGO — (AP)—Grocery basket costs have dropped since fall from the highest level in six years to the lowest point in more than 18 months, a survey of food prices in wholesale and retail markets disclosed today.

Meat prices led the decline, but most vegetables, fruits and dinner table staples such as sugar, potatoes, eggs, butter and lard also were lower.

Since September wholesale meat prices have taken one of their sharpest drops on record, with declines ranging from 9 to 50 per cent for all cuts offered by packing houses.

Increased productions and larger supplies of some food items were responsible for price declines to some extent, market observers said.

GETS 3-YEAR SENTENCE FOR TORTURING DOG

Man With Court Record Over 30-Year Period, Convicted as Habitual Offender.

ACT INVOKED FIRST TIME

Witness Testifies One Eye Kicked In, Flesh Torn Off, and Hips, Foot Crushed.

The habitual offender act was invoked in municipal court this morning for the first time on a charge of cruelty to animals, when Calvin Shanabarger, with a court record for cruelty covering more than 30 years, was given the maximum sentence on this charge of one to three years in the Columbus workhouse.

Shanabarger, who lives on the upper Lucas road, was arrested yesterday by Patrolmen George Yoakum and Howard Schuck after Charles Appleman, operator of a coal yard on Park avenue east, called police and told them that a man was beating a dog near his place of business.

Call Humane Officer.

Officers brought the animal to police station and Mrs. Marie Menchan, humane officer, and Misses Helen and Florence Workman, who are known for their humanitarian efforts on behalf of dogs, were also called.

Miss Helen Workman testified in court this morning that the dog was in pitiable condition; that one of its eyes had been kicked in, the flesh torn off its leg exposing the tendons, the toe nails and cushions of the feet torn off, [illegible]

Wadsworth, veterinarian, said, that the dog's breathing was the only sign of life.

Admits Beating Animal.

Shanabarger, who listened without expression to this testimony, which was corroborated by that of officers and other witnesses said that he hadn't kicked the dog in the head as witnesses testified, but that he had been dragging it along the cinders and beating it with an iron chain to "teach it to lead." He admitted having been arrested and convicted on similar charges a number of times over a period of years.

Shanabarger's record in the past nine years includes a fine of $50 and costs on cruelty to ani-

ENDS SESSION

League's 100th Meeting Asks Powers to Help China.

GENEVA—(AP) The council of the League of Nations closed its 100th session today after adopting a resolution asking league powers to aid China.

Two nations, Poland and Peru, abstained from the voting.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, the Chinese delegate, warned that violence in the Orient jeopardized the peace of Europe. Appealing for aid, he insisted it was the league's duty and "opportunity" to discourage Japanese aggression in China.

In an impassioned speech Dr. Koo declared maltreatment of Americans and Europeans by Japanese soldiers in China had been an intentional step in a Japanese plan to drive occidentals out of the Orient.

"Japanese soldiers," he said, "appear to take special pride in insulting a white man."

JENKINS BACK TO TESTIFY IN O. S. R. INQUIRY

Ex-Superintendent Returns as Jury Continues Probe of Old Transactions.

Thomas C. Jenkins, superintendent of Mansfield Reformatory for 17 years, and now head of London prison farm, returned to Mansfield today to testify before the special parole grand jury, sitting at the reformatory.

Jankins came to testify voluntarily, following a telephone conversation yesterday afternoon with Assistant Attorney General George Hurley, who is conducting the special investigation.

He arrived in Mansfield about 10 a. m. from London, and went into a conference with Arthur L. Glattke, his successor as head of the reformatory, while the grand jury was hearing other witnesses.

Hurley said Jenkins had agreed voluntarily "to verify certain facts brought out in testimony before the jury."

grand jury this morning was Tom Culler, a former secretary of the Farmers Equity Exchange at Lucas. He testified only briefly, and was followed into the grand jury room by O. F. Garver, assistant superintendent and W. A. McFadden, reformatory quartermaster. Both had testified at earlier sessions of the grand jury.

Ben F. Owen, chief clerk, who has been before the jurors with reformatory records more than any other individual, was also waiting to be called.

The grand jury has spent the greater part of its time recently delving into financial transactions between the reformatory and the exchange, chiefly between 1925 and 1928.

Yesterday afternoon the jurors heard testimony from C. L. Ramsey, Butler, a detective for the Erie railroad. It was reported that he had testified concerning alleged smuggling of articles into the reformatory from freight cars on the reformatory siding.

Four inmates also testified yesterday afternoon. Although Hurley maintained his customary policy of declining to make their

BUSINESS GAIN IS ONLY 'IF' IN COUNTY'S PLAN

Wolfe Gets OK on Program That Calls For No Contribution From City Funds.

$8,250 A MONTH SET UP

State to Contribute $5,500 Per Month, County Puts Up Half That Much.

Richland county's relief problem has been solved for the first six months of 1938—if business and industrial conditions improve to lift the burden from the county before summer.

The county had set up a plan today that will provide approximately $50,000 for direct relief during the first half of the year, County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said. He added, however, that the success of the relief set-up depends entirely on the extent to which business revives in the spring

State Auditor Ok's It.

The plan, approved by the state auditor's office, brings monthly allocations of about $5,500 from the state, with the county to put up half that amount each month, or $2,750, making the total available each month $8,250.

The arrangement is expected to relieve the city of Mansfield and Madison township trustees of the obligation to contribute to the relief fund until the last half of the year.

Although relief costs during the past two months have been twice the amount made available under Wolfe's plan, county officials expect the cost to drop sharply this month and next.

Reduction Foreseen.

The December bill for relief was $14,000, and in January $18,000. However, commissioners have exduce the relief lists and costs sharply. In addition to this action, the expected pick-up in industrial operations is expected to ease the burden, and the advent of warmer weather will further reduce costs, through eliminating the necessity of providing so much fuel for relief clients.

After the county's funds are exhausted, however, the sub-divisions, including Mansfield, Madison township, Shelby and Jefferson township, all under the county set-up, will be asked to help care for their needy families, it was said, but officials of these subdivisions will have six months in which to find the money.

The county's $18,600 allocation

Mansfield Youth Who Failed In Hold-up Held to Jury.

Charged with the attempted robbery of the downtown Stillman theater in Cleveland last Friday, Joseph Wardacz, Mansfield, today was bound over to the grand jury under $5,000 bond when he pleaded not guilty in municipal court, International News Service dispatches to The News-Journal said today.

Wardacz was captured in busy Euclid avenue by Jack Lykes, Stillman manager, and D. A. Miller, of Wadsworth, a passerby. He had fled when Miss Marie Shimel, in the box office, screamed at his demand for money.

Lykes pursued and caught him, but was felled by two blows. Wardacz then dashed across the street where Miller tackled him. Lykes and Miller sat on him until police arrived. He did not have a gun. Mansfield directories do not list a Joseph Wardacz.

Much Ado About Groundhogs and Shadows

(By International News Service)

CANOE RIDGE WATERWORKS, Punxsutawney, Pa.—Anger oozed from every sentence of the renowned weather prognosticator, Brother Groundhog, as he told the world today that there would definitely be six more weeks of winter.

"There will be six weeks more of the coldest, iciest, sleetiest, muddiest, stormiest, most miserable weather you have ever had, but compared to my other troubles, that kind of weather won't even bother me," angrily shouted the chuck as he sprang from his burrow.

The newspaper scribes gathered around the aged seer looked amazed as he, with a shake of his head, continued the tirade.

"Do you know that those guns the Chinese and the Japanese are using are so loud that I practically haven't had any sleep all winter? Here I am, needing all my strength to accurately predict the weather, and I can't sleep.

"I bet that old fakir, the Quarryville chuck, will come out fresh and cheerful with his false prognostications The quack! He doesn't have my fine temperament

QUARRYVILLE, Pa.—Today is the day when his superb highness, the "Exalted Inspirational Patriarchal Prophet" and his brethren determine whether winter continues or gives way to spring.

It's no easy task, but the members of Slumbering Groundhog lodge have made it an annual duty. So this morning, led by his superb highness, the brethren donned the raiment of their rank and took their posts at carefully chosen groundhog holes.

Should a groundhog emerge and see his shadow, he will scurry back to await another six weeks of winter, according to legend. Should he see no shadow, he will forage for garlic, his favorite food, and spring will be at hand. That's the time-honored belief of the brethren, who choose this day each year to pass up life's comforts for the rigors of groundhog inspection.

Sentinel duty was ordered this year by the defender of the faith, his superb highness, the E. I. P. P., who is known most of the time as Joe Swinehart. The ex-

WASHINGTON—Government mammalogists solemnly declared today that no ground-hog has any business coming out of his hole now—least of all to look for his shadow.

It is much too early for any sensible ground-hog to end his winter nap, they said. The experts scoffed at the superstition that when a ground-hog sees his shadow Feb. 2 he goes back to bed for six weeks more winter weather and that if he does not see his shadow spring is here.

"Whoever picked Feb. 2 for ground-hog day got his dates mixed," the mammalogist-in-chief said. "On that day every sensible ground-hog is sleeping soundly."

Forecaster Charles L. Mitchell said:

"The ground-hog's action have no meteorological significance.

"The best way to tell what the weather is going to be is to watch for the weather forecast in your newspaper."

BRITAIN SENDS MORE SHIPS TO 'PIRACY' AREA

Two New Cruisers Dispatched to Mediterranean Where Vessel Was Sunk.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Two of Britain's most modern cruisers—the Southampton and Newcastle—have been ordered to proceed immediately to Valencia to strengthen British naval forces in the western Mediterranean.

This action, International News Service learned today, was taken as a direct result of the torpedoing and sinking of the British freighter Endymion by an unidentified "pirate" submarine near Cartagena, with a loss of 11 lives.

The two cruisers will augment eight British destroyers — the Fury, Firedrake, Fortune, Forester, Faulkner, Fearless, Foresight and Foxhound—now scouring the Mediterranean for the submarine.

Italian Aid Ready.

Charges by the Spanish government that Italy is giving naval aid to the Spanish insurgents were accompanied by a report in the London News Chrinicle that Il Duce is ready to ship 50,000 more troops to Spain to aid the rebels and that plans have been prepared for attacks against government lines on all vital fronts.

The Spanish government embassy, in a note to the British government, alluded to the loss of the Endymion and stated:

"It must now be clear to the whole world that the submarines committing these acts of piracy in the Mediterranean are Italian."

Meanwhile, a three-way conference among Britain, France and Italy was announced as a new crisis developed over the Spanish loyalist charges that the Endymion was sunk by an Italian submersible.

The French and Italian ambassadors were summoned to a meeting this afternoon with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, while Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain instructed the admiralty to order the British Navy to "get the submarine."

In a preliminary talk with the French and Italian ambassadors, Charles Corbin and Dino Grandi, Eden said the British government had decided immediate action was necessary. The French and Italian naval attaches will accompany the ambassadors to today's vital meeting.

ASKS DUFFY TO RULE ON CASE

Marriott Seeks Opinion on Where to Send Girl Convicted of Attack.

County Prosecutor Glenn W. Marriott today asked the attorney general's office to decide whether the county can send Miss Esther Eubanks, 18, colored, Mansfield, to the Delaware industrial school for girls for assault and battery.

Ordered committed to the Delaware institution by Judge C. J. Anderson in county juvenile court, the girl is still in the county detention home until the case is decided.

Because of Miss Eubanks' age, officials at the Delaware school refused to admit her four days ago. The law provides that only girls under 18 may be taken at the institution, but Judge Anderson said today that a new juvenile statute, effective last August, permits the admitance of persons over 18 if they attained that age after the crime was committed.

Miss Eubanks pleaded guilty to an attack on Mrs. Jerome Hecht, Mansfield, at the county relief office on Jan. 10. Between that date and the time she was sentenced last week she passed her 18th birthday anniversary.

FIGHT TO KEEP RAIL SERVICE

Shelby Group In Sandusky to Protest Discontinuance of B. & O. Trains.

A Shelby delegation representing Shelby business interests and headed by Mayor D. B. Young, protested today at Sandusky against the proposed discontinuance of Baltimore & Ohio passenger and express service between Willard and Sandusky, International News Service dispatches to the News-Journal said today.

The delegation, in Sandusky for a hearing before Examiner E. J. Nolan of the state utilities commission, based their protest on the inconvenience and probable financial loss that would result. Principal among the business houses represented was the Shelby Salesbook company, which last year shipped express totaling 265,000 pounds over the line, the examiner was told.

Those attending from Shelby in addition to Mayor Young were Theodore Lutz, law director; Chester Monn, president of the Shelby Better Business club; Paul Bushey, Shelby Salesbook company; Kenneth Swank, Shelby Cycle company and Ross Stroup, Shelby Spring Hinge company.

Fishery operators and municipal officials of Sandusky also were present for the hearing. Representatives of the fish companies claimed they shipped three quarters of a million pounds of fish via the railroad's express services in the first 11 months of 1937, and said the discontinuance would result in financial losses.

The railroad company, through its counsel, Harry E. Welber, of Newark, claimed it lost $27,458 on passenger and express service on the line.

The hearings will continue on the other cities for several weeks before a ruling is made by the commission.

mals charge in April, 1929; assault and battery conviction in September, 1930; $25 and costs for cruelty on February, 1932; $100 and costs and a workhouse sentence in November, 1933; and $100 and costs and 30 days in jail for cruelty. Captain Tom Bell said today that he had arrested Shanabarger on a cruelty charge almost 30 years ago. He has also been brought before the Humane society a number of times.

The charges against Shanabarger have involved numerous acts of cruelty, such as blinding animals, breaking their legs and beating them almost to death, records show. In each case Shanabarger has offered the same defense —that he was "trying to teach them something."

The affidavit against him today was signed by Mrs Menchan, and the habitual offender charge was filed by Assistant County Prosecutor Harold Lutz. Judge G E. Kalbfleisch, who sentenced Shanabarger, said that the state act covering the case provided a maximum indeterminate sentence of one to three years in the workhouse for a person convicted three times and sentenced for a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude.

Shanabarger will be taken to Columbus to begin sentence immediately, police said.

or sensitiveness to conditions, and somebody might be fool enough to believe him.

"But you can tell for yourselves. Look at that shadow. It's the biggest, blackest one I've ever cast. Just look at it! Why, we'll have six weeks of the worst weather possible.

"Honestly, this is the worst winter I've ever spent, not only no sleep, but the president called me to Washington last week to talk about the weather. He seemed to think I could do something about it. As if I would ever attempt to interfere with the weatherman!

"And was I insulted! He wanted me to give a few people more work, so he suggested that I have a couple of assistants. Assistants, bah! I'm willing to resign if I don't give satisfaction, but when I have to have someone to help me cast a shadow, I'm going to quit You would think I was getting old or something and here I am a mere youngster of 200 summers or so.

"I'm so mad at everything and everybody. I'm going back in right now and don't dare bother me until next Feb. 2. It will take that long to catch up on all the sleep I've lost.

"Better hurry along now, you people, because there is going to be an awful blizzard pretty soon."

Thus spoke the old Chuck himself, the sage of Punxsutawney, as he waddled about and chucked himself back into his burrow for another six weeks.

Looks like a hard winter still ahead, folks!

ALLOTS $6,400 FOR WPA WATER LINE PROJECT

Council Authorizes Extensions on Three Streets, Sanitary Sewers on Three Others.

To provide for additional WPA employment, city council last night authorized an appropriation of $6,400 for the extension of water lines on three streets, and approved legislation for the construction of sanitary sewers on three others.

Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert was authorized to file an application with the WPA for aid in financing the construction of extensions to the water distribution system.

They would include the construction of an eight-inch main on Wood street from Cline avenue to Glessner avenue, a six-inch main on Wood street from Bowland road to Sturges avenue to Cline avenue, and a eight-inch main on Cline avenue from Wood street to Lexington avenue.

Part of Project.

The construction work would be a part of the WPA blanket project, including water and sanitary sewer lines, that was approved by WPA several months ago. All that is necessary to proceed with the work is that WPA provide federal funds to release the project, city officials said.

Legislation approved for the construction of sanitary sewers calls for the construction of eight-inch lines on Chilton avenue, Andover and Yale drive, and Harter avenue.

With WPA assistance, on Harter avenue, the property owners will be assessed for $600 with the city's share $12; on Chilton avenue, the property owners will be assessed $500 with the city paying $10, and on Andover road and Yale drive, the property owners' share is figured at $1,600 and the city's $440.

Preliminary legislation also was approved last night, calling for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Shepard road and Overlook road.

Other business transacted by council last night was:

Authorized settleent of claim of William Bowman for damages of $4.25 to automobile caused by open ditch on Home avenue last November.

Tabled claim of Phillip Goettl, jr., for $350 caused by storm waters flooding property last September.

Referred to street committee petition from property owners on East Townview extension for street improvement.

Referred to street committee request from property owners to vacate Davis road between Edgewood road and Chevy Chase road.

Authorized city solicitor to defend interests of city in damage suit of Mary L. Lutton vs. City of Mansfield now pending in common pleas court.

Authorized construction of memorial flag pole and base in Liberty park by Frank Fisch memorial committee.

alted hibernator, George Washington Hensel; three hibernating governors, Al Fritz, Hugh Gilbert and George Washington Hensel, jr.; and the secretary and bondless treasurer, William Hensel, led their brethren into the fields.

The most likely groundhog holes are watched by squads "commanded by a prophet of rank." It is said, and vigorously denied, that one member of high rank possesses a stuffed groundhog, which is used for observation in the event no living animal appears.

It is also denied, and vigorously, that Slumbering Groundhog lodge has used the groundhog as an excuse for a stag party, away from home, wife and mother-in-law.

The brethren assembled at 9:30 a. m. to receive instructions from his superb highness. Then they partook of "a light lunch savoring of fast," and spent the afternoon in meditation at the groundhog holes. They will parade later in nightcaps to a church dining hall for a "sumptuous meal" to be served by "graceful maidens of the congregation."

After dinner, the brethren will "reluctantly" leave the ladies and hurry to their lodge for "felicitation of members, brotherly mingling, all round revival of faith, hope and exercises of charity."

Properly "felicitated," his superb highness, the E. I. P. P. will reveal the results of the day's observations, and the brethren therewith will either discard or retain their flannels.

All the members are local business men. Their lodge is one of the most famous in the country.

A Farmer's Diary

FEB. 1.

THIS morning I was aroused early by a peculiar knock at the back door I listened closely, and turned over, hoping the early visitor would leave and I would hear nothing more It was too cold to get up

But I heard the knock again, and this time the rattle of a chain and a faint whimper of distress Something was wrong I dressed hurriedly and went downstairs. Quickly I opened the kitchen door. There stood Laddie, our collie dog, holding up his left paw with a steel trap and chain clamped upon it. He whined piteously, and shivered.

I spoke to him reassuringly, as I took the ugly trap in one hand and the forepaw in the other, and gripped the spring until the jaws of the trap were separated During this operation the dog licked both my hands continuously I examined the leg for broken bones, but found none However I brought him into the kitchen and bathed the wounded leg with a warm disinfecting solution He wagged his tail and tried to lick my face to tell me that he appreciated my kindness Then I bandaged the leg and let him go back to his bed in the barn straw. He is not a house dog, and can rarely be induced to enter the house at all Although he has all the collie markings—a white collar, four white feet, a strip of white upon his long nose, long tawny yellow hair—I have thought sometimes that perhaps some remote ancestor was a husky, for he loves the cold and even in the coldest weather will lie in the snow, content.

He is the guardian of the premises, the children's playfellow, a real member of the family. I hope he will not be very lame.

JAPS CAPTURE CHINESE TOWN

Fengyang Falls as Column of Japanese Troops Attack; Destroy Rail Span.

(By International News Service)

SHANGHAI—The Chinese city of Fengyang, 16 miles from strategic Pengu and 100 miles northwest of Nanking, was captured today by a Japanese column, according to reports received here today.

Other advices from Hankow said the Japanese offensive along the southern sector of the Tientsin-Pukow railway is in full blast and that Chinese defense positions have been heavily battered by Nipponese artillery and aircraft.

To slow the Japanese drive, Chinese forces destroyed a railroad bridge across the Jwairi river south of Pengu. Chinese reinforcements are rushing to the battle front from Suchow to stem the invaders' advance.

Meanwhile, fears arose for the safety of American missionaries and other refugees caught in various war zones.

Hong Kong reports stated 80 Americans aboard a refugee train en route from Kankow, provisional capital of the Chiang Kai-Shek government, to Hong Kong may have met with trouble.

Aboard the train are 65 children of American missionaries. Progress of the train on its dangerous journey is not known, it was stated, because communications along the route have been disrupted by bombings.

So far, however, no serious concern is felt for the travelers.

'Unconscious' Girl Motorist Fined, License Revoked

A young Alliance woman who appeared in municipal court this morning to answer a charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, drugs or narcotics, told the court she had driven an automobile from Ontario to Mansfield in an unconscious condition. She added that she remembered nothing from the time she saw the Ontario sign until she ran into a car in Mansfield at North Park and Main streets.

Anna Lee Carr, private secretary to an Alliance attorney, denied that she was intoxicated but testified that she was under the influence of a combination of six powerful sleeping tablets and a glass of beer She said she had taken the tablets in Galion and the beer along the road after leaving there. She said she began to feel numb, and the last thing she remembered was the Ontario sign.

E. E. Long, R. F. D., Bellville, the complaining witness, said Miss Carr drove around Central park weaving in and out of traffic, and had run into the rear of his car while he waited for the traffic light at North Park and Main streets.

Officers George Yoakum and Howard Schuck, who arrested her, said the woman was unable to speak or walk when they took her from behind the wheel, and that they had to carry her.

In passing sentence on her, Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch said she had been fortunate that she had not been the cause of one or more deaths on the drive from Ontario to Mansfield. She was fined $100 and costs and her driver's license revoked for one year.

NEW DEAL ACTS TO BLOCK WAR PENSION BILL

Administration Fears Heavy Drain on Treasury Through Widows' Measure.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Fearful of a huge future drain on the treasury through general World war pensions, the administration today moved to check a powerful house movement for the Gasque World war widows and orphans pension bill.

The measure, providing widows pensions of $22 a month regardless of whether the veteran suffered in the service, was reported by the pensions committee in spite of an adverse budget bureau report.

Cost to Rise.

Estimated to cost $68,000,000 the first year, if all the 188,000 eligibles applied for pensions, veterans bureau officials said the cost would rise rapidly in the future as the death rate of veterans increases.

"Advice has been received from the acting director, bureau of the budget, that the proposed legislation would not be in accord with the program of the president," said Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans bureau head, in a letter to the committee.

Hines charged that granting of general pensions would reverse the policy established by congress in dealing with disabled World war veterans. Congress, he said, sought to avoid a general pension system.

"Even assuming that the rates were more in accord with long-established precedent, it is evident that any proposal to grant non-service-connected death benefits on account of service in the World war should be viewed with concern," said Hines.

He pointed out that congress had sought to evolve a system of compensation for World war veterans who incurred ills in the service, and provided vocational training and war risk insurance —all designed to avoid "the disadvantages of the pension system" as it existed prior to the World war.

He also pointed out that congress provides aid for widows and orphans if the veteran's death was due 20 per cent to service-connected causes.

DID HE SEE IT?

Sun Was Out, If Groundhog Was Looking For It.

Whether the groundhog saw his shadow in Richland county today depends on what time he ventured from his den to do his annual job of weather predicting.

If he waited until 10:30 a. m. to come out, rub his eyes and look for his shadow, the county is due for six weeks of winter—provided of course, there's any truth in the legend.

The sun shone feebly at intervals from 10:30 until noon, and if the density of the shadow has any effect on the degree of cold, February and March hold nothing severe in store.

The forecasters, unmindful of the "shadow prophecies," predicted warmer weather with occasional rain tonight and Thursday.

The temperature was well above normal in Mansfield during the past 24 hours, after the mercury climbed to 42 yesterday afternoon and to the same mark at noon today.

SEEKS PROBE OF DRUG PURCHASES

Dye Defends Price Paid By State Purchasing Office.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — T. E. Dye, assistant state purchasing agent, will ask the senate investigating committee to go into the question of drug purchases when it resumes sessions today.

Dye denied statements by Sen. W R. Foss (D.) Mercer, not a member of the committee, that the state was paying excessive prices for drugs. Dye said Foss either was misinformed or deliberately made a false accusation.

Interests dealing in "hot mix" road material were expected to appear before the committee to answer attacks made on the industry by Sen. Verner E. Metcalf (R.) Washington.

Anybody in or near Omaha, Neb., who wants to know the latest news about King Boris of Bulgaria only has to go to Gus Phillips, 48-year-old railroad engineer. For Phillips recently telephoned the Bulgarian king and the two had quite a chat. Phillips met King Boris in 1932 when he visited Bulgaria and became friends through mutual interest in railroading. The call, put through on the king's birthday, cost Phillips $31.

PLANS REPAIRS ON CITY HALL

Galion Council Takes Action to Remodel Building or Obtain New One.

GALION—At its regular meeting Tuesday night, city council passed a motion to have City Solicitor George Davies draw up legislation to impower Service Director Jay Nichols to employ an architect to draw up plans and approximate cost for remodeling the city building. Specifications will make it possible for council to determine if the cost to remodel the present building would be more advisable than securing another building.

The following appointments made by Mayor W. M. King were approved by council: Stentz Motsinger as a member of the Civil Service commission for a term of six years; W. C. Mason as a member of the board of trustees of the sinking fund for a term of four years; and Mrs. Frances Horner as a member of the board of health of the city for five years.

Mayor King's report for January showed the following collections: fines $30; costs $17.40; licenses $40.

A resolution adopted authorizes and directs the Director of Public Safety Jay Nichols to enter into contract with Good Samaritan hospital on behalf of the city, for taking care of the indigent and sick inhabitants of the city who are unable to pay their hospital expenses during 1938. The payments will be at the rate of $150 per month.

Council also adopted rules and laws of government of council regarding regulations of council meetings.

LIGHTS ON AGAIN

BUCYRUS—For the first time in four years, Bucyrus' "white way" lights on Sandusky avenue were turned on Tuesday night, thereby fulfilling a campaign promise made by Mayor George T. Dustman, who made the lighting situation a campaign issue in the last municipal election.

Half of the lights were turned off in 1934 as an economy measure and efforts of individual groups since to resume full downtown lighting were unsuccessful.

ence then rose to their feet loudly offering resolutions, shouting demands for recognition, heckling Roth and otherwise adding to the confusion.

With the meeting entirely out of control, Roper seized the gavel from Roth and after a few minutes managed to restore some semblance of order.

With further open forum debate obviously impossible, Roper urged the delegates to divide into 10 groups immediately, each group to discuss one particular problem confronting small business. These problems included loans to small industry, wage and hour standards, unemployment, housing, installment selling, among others.

Many of the delegates were reluctant to discontinue further debate but Roper's suggestion finally was carried by a standing vote.

PITTMAN ACTS TO REPLY TO BORAH BLAST

Foreign Relations Committee Head Says Nation Free of Purported 'Agreement.'

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Chairman Key Pittman, (D-Nev.), of the senate's powerful foreign relations committee, declared today that he was certain the United States remained free of any understanding or agreement to consult with Great Britain in international affairs.

As a key congressional figure on foreign policy, Pittman's significant statement was intended to clarify questions arising from senate debate in which Sen. William E. Borah (R-Ida.), warned that there was a widespread impression of a tacit agreement between the two nations.

Frowns On Debate.

The foreign relations committee chairman who said he did not feel warranted in prolonging debate yesterday, told the United Press that:

1. The remarks of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden that the two governments were in daily consultation referred only to the bombing of the U. S. S. gunboat Panay and the British gunboat Ladybird on the Yangtze river and did not in any way, in Pittman's opinion, imply a policy of general consultation as suggested by Borah.

2. The administration's foreign policy of non-intervention in affairs of other nations gives this government full freedom to act whenever developments abroad interfere with our affairs as in the Panay incident.

Defines 'Quarantine'.

3. The word "quarantine" which President Roosevelt used in his Chicago speech in reference to wrong-doing nations, does not necessarily mean confinement in medical or any other usage but may mean to prevent someone from coming into or interfering with our affairs. Sen. Hiram W. Johnson, (R-Calif.), had charged the president's use of the word was a dangerous and useless "threat."

Pittman's remarks coincided with renewed demands by congressional sources hostile to a big navy that there be a more complete explanation of foreign policy prior to action on the naval appropriations bill. Pittman said he saw no need for calling Secretary of State Cordell Hull or his aids to testify.

4 Soviets Facing Death As Ice Floe Cracks In Storm

MOSCOW—(INS)—Four soviet explorers, isolated on a polar ice floe, faced possible death today after an arctic hurricane smashed their floating "island" home, leaving them and part of their encampment on an ice fragment only 300 yards long and 200 y. 's wide.

Two of their reserve depots were swept away when the storm tore a crack 500 yards wide in the floe which had been their home since they were dropped virtually at the North Pole to study the arctic "weather kitchen." The men, on the floe for eight months, were not hurt.

One crack extended under the scientists' tent, forcing them to move to a snowhouse. They sent a radio report to Moscow stating:

"We shall strive to inform you of our location later. In the event our communications are cut, please do not worry."

Rescue preparations were rushed here. Five planes and three ships have ben mobilized to take the scientists from their dangerous perch.

RECORDS STRONG EARTH SHOCKS

College Instrument Shows Violent Quake Near Australia.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—(U.P.)—Canisius college officials revealed today that their seismograph recorded a violent earthquake yesterday afternoon.

The quake started at 2:20 p. m. and continued all afternoon, they said. The Rev. John P. Delaney, seismologist, said the shock was so violent it shook the needle off the recording roll.

He said no accurate estimates were available as to its location because the record was "so badly jumbled." He described the quake as the most severe in the last ten years. He estimated it occurred approximately 9,500 miles from New York in the general direction of Australia.

The most sincere compliment paid the Community Players' show, "Kind Lady," last night was the theft from Tausse's pharmacy of a box of tickets containing reserved seats that had not been called for yesterday morning. It was an unusually good attendance and all of the good seats had been reserved several days ago. A few of them, however, had been left in the reserve box for persons who planned to call for them yesterday. They were stolen sometime Monday night or Tuesday morning. Since no one knows where these seats were in the house, it was impossible to trace the theft.

"Whatever became of Peter Werner?" has been a question the former Mansfield man's friends haven't been able to answer for a long time, but the "mystery" has been all cleared up. Werner, formerly with the Roderick Lean Manufacturing company, left Mansfield about 12 years ago to live on the west coast, and few of his old friends had heard from him in recent years. The other day, however, Fred J. Berry, 214 South Adams street, received a letter from Werner in Honolulu, where he said both the weather and business "were fine."

The task of editing Mansfield's two school newspapers, The Hyphonerian at Senior high school, and the Times at John Simpson junior high for the last semester of the school year, will be handled by a brother and sister team, William and Julia Fishback. COUNCIL ORDERS FOUR NEW CARS

Purchase of 2 Police Cruisers Adds 1 to Department; 3 Used Cars to Be Sold.

City council last night approved legislation calling for the purchase of four new vehicles for the city, two of which are to be used by the police department, and also directed the sale of three used cars that are now in service.

With a lone dissenting vote cast by Third ward Councilman George C. Kyle, an appropriation of $1,800 was voted for the purchase of two new police cruisers that will add another squad car to the department.

Kyle said he could not see the need of an additional car in the police department at the present time. He said some attention should be given to the purchase of new fire apparatus to replace equipment that was 20 years old.

Legislation calls for the purchase of a new heavy duty truck for the street department at a total cost not to exceed $1,600 which will be paid from the special gas tax funds received by the city from the state.

Council also authorized the purchase of a new auto at a cost not to exceed $800 to replace a two-year-old model now used by Safety-Service Director Tracy C. Styert.

Styert said it was planned to turn the car he was using at the present over to the superintendent of streets after it had been repaired.

Three resolutions approved by council called for the sale of a police cruiser for not less than $150, a half-ton street department truck at not less than $150, and a 1929 coupe used by the street department at not less than $20.

PLAYERS' STELLAR INDIVIDUAL PERFORMANCES MARK 'KIND LADY'

By JANE WILLIAMS

A play marked by good individual performances but lacking audience appeal was presented at Senior High school auditorium last night by the Community Players.

"Kind Lady" by Hugh Walpole and Edward Chodorov as a story is intriguing, but as a play it fails to hold the interest of its audience; yet in spite of this, its cast of new players won the admiration of the large audience for smoothness of performance. The play is all dialog and little action, and the dialog fails to build up to emotional climaxes.

It revolves around an amazing chapter in the life of a wealthy English woman, who lives a quiet, middle aged life. The smooth current of her life is changed for several years when she becomes a prisoner in her own home while a group of crooks take over her belongings and check book. All of her attempts to escape are frustrated until a rainy afternoon when all of the crooks leave her for a short time and a man from her bank accidentally meets her in her home and hears the strange story from her.

The play begins with a prologue in which the woman meets the man from the bank, then the three acts depict the story she told him, and the epilogue shows the house surrounded by police, the crooks trapped and "kind lady" going to her freedom.

Seldom if ever, has a Players production been given with a better cast of women. All of them, with the exception of Betty Osbun, were making their first appearance. Miss Osbun, in the title role of "Kind Lady," did an excellent piece of work and displayed a fine poise.

Mary Montgomery as Lucy Weston, Jean Larcombe as the shady and crude Mrs. Edwards, Norma Johnston as the faithful English maid, Dorothy Moore in the role of the niece, all gave intelligent portrayals, while Sylvia Henderson as the down-trodden companion of the master crook, and Jean Balliett as the "brat" of the Edwardses made bit parts seem like major roles.

There were three major male roles and two of them were done by newcomers. These were A. D. Robb who played the ingenuous English crook, the man on the street whom "kind lady" brought into her home, only to have him take possession; and Perry Cook as the free and easy American. Robb played his role with an aplomb that made him appear a most impertinent and convincing villain, while Cook was quite at home as the good-natured American who brought the only touch of gaiety into the sedate English home.

Paul Bell, the third of the trio, maintained his reputation for good performances as Edwards, the crook's assistant. Bell has appeared with the Players on several occasions.

Two of the players who are seen frequently in Community Plays and who did outstanding work in the first play this season, had bit roles last night. They were Ben Goodenough, one of the crooks, and Russell Tither as the French art authority.

John McCann as Foster, the bank's man, also did an important bit well.

The setting was an attractive one of an English living room and hall. Like all of the Community Players stage arrangements, it was done by Frank Forshee. Helen Bacon, who has directed the players for several years, deserves a large share of the credit for the performances that were turned in by the players Ben Goodenough came into the picture as assistant director for the Players with this show. Herbert H. Schettler was in charge of makeup and Mrs. Schettler arranged costumes for the players.

The musical background for the play last night was provided by a Mansfield orchestra of 14 players under the direction of Laurence Todd.

KILLER TELLS JURY OF SCENE ON PIANO BENCH

Wife and Friend Discovered In 'Awful Positions' Prior to Slaying, He Relates.

(By Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES — Paul A. Wright was subjected to searching cross-examination today as prosecutors tried to blast his story he killed his wife and his business associate, John Kimmel, because he found them in "awful positions."

Chief Prosecutor S. E. Roll tried to ferret from the airport executive's story, related in direct examination, a loophole to fortify the state's charge of deliberate murder.

Wright's version of the fantastic tragedy was in the court records. He said he brought Kimmel, his operations manager at Union Air terminal, to his Glendale home for a nightcap. They had a round of drinks. Wright, weary, retired for a nap. He was awakened by a "noise" from the piano. . . .

Sitting on Bench.

"I walked to the doorway separating the bedroom from the living room. I didn't see Evelyn, but I saw Johnny sitting on the bench before the grand piano. I thought she might be on the davenport or in the kitchen. I walked toward the kitchen, turned, and turned again.

"Then I saw Evelyn on the piano bench with Johnny. . . . They were in awful positions. Then Evelyn rose to a sitting position. She put her arms around Kimmel. He put his arms around her. They kissed.

"Then everything inside me just exploded. The next thing I knew I was standing there with a gun in my hand. There was blood, and he was moaning."

That was the climax of Wright's fight to save himself from the lethal gas chamber. By his own testimony he branded his wife as unfaithful to marriage vows.

He bared many secrets of his life as a student at the University of Wisconsin, as an artillery sergeant in the World war, as a bond trader in Chicago "with 26 telephones on my desk," as a druggist in St. Petersburg, Fla., and as an airplane salesman.

He admitted he told friends he suspected his wife of unfaithfulness but insisted that at no time did he plan to take her life. Nov. 8, 1937, was the first time, he said, that, to his knowledge, Mrs. Wright and Kimmel were together alone That was the night they were killed.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

Light on the Labor League.

IT IS, of course, necessary to discount to some extent the recent angry words of Mr. William Green in denouncing the so-called Labor's Nonpartisan league. If the league were now dominated by the A. F. of L. instead of the CIO influences, Mr. Green undoubtedly would sing a different tune.

Hardly anyone will dispute that. Under such circumstances Mr. Green would find considerable merit in the league and be disposed to defend it against the charges he now makes. None the less, such is the skill of propagandists and so gullible is the great American public that it takes the bitterness of a feud such as that between Mr. Green and Mr. Lewis to get at the facts. If they are united almost any kind of sham can be covered up. But divided and mad, the truth is fairly certain to come out.

TWO YEARS ago, when the league was first formed, with Major (now Senator) George L. Berry as its head, there was so much that was distinctly phony about the organization that it hardly seemed possible it could be put over. But those who felt that way underestimated the power of the publicity agents. By means of its well-selected name, which is an undoubted asset, and the constant, solemn and sonorous claims of its head, the league succeeded in getting itself taken seriously, though its membership was largely a paper membership and its nonpartisan character was a joke.

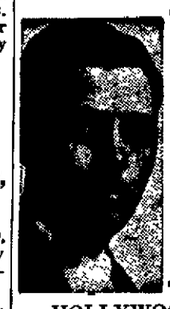
WHAT IT actually was at the start—and, for that matter, still is—was a thinly disguised political instrument for a few labor leaders, whose power largely hinged upon administration support and who could not successfully play their game without what seemed a White House alliance The league was primarily formed to make labor support of Mr. Roosevelt look larger and more convincing than it really was.

THE BEST evidence came the day after the election in the promptness with which the league spokesmen—posing as representing all labor—modestly attributed Mr. Roosevelt's triumph to the league's efforts in his behalf. Unquestionably the league got out a lot of literature, collected and spent a lot of money in the campaign, but the hollowness of these claims was not hidden from the discerning and informed. Since the election and his own elevation to the senate Major Berry has resigned as its head, and the league has been more generally revealed as a CIO political prop.

NOW MR. GREEN, in a hot Miami broadcast, asserts that it is a dummy organization, in process of being taken over by the extreme radicals and communists, who are trying, under its sham nonpartisan cloak, to organize a political alliance between labor and farmer, and to promote "un-American ideas." Whether Mr. Green's allegations are one hundred per cent right or not, the fact remains that this farmer-labor alliance is the communist dream in this country; the chief objective for which they strive; the alliance which they believe, if "properly formed," eventually will be able to "take over" the country and run it. It will be recalled, too, that this was the alliance so eloquently urged by Dr. Tugwell as far back as 1934, who wanted to present a "united front to business greed."

THE further fact is that there has been some rather convincing evidence—and certainly a good many charges—of communistic penetration of CIO ranks. Nobody thinks either John L. Lewis or Philip Murray is a communist or communistically inclined. It none the less seems true that communist leaders have centered upon the CIO as the organization through which they can best promote their purposes and are burrowing into it as deeply as they can. And certainly there is some truth in Mr. Green's accusations that "crusading communists" are joining the league with the idea of making it their own.

IN ANY event, while Mr. Green's motives may not be wholly patriotic, it is valuable to have the light turned on the league and its true nature, exclusive it never was what it pretended to be and is less so now. It ought not to be taken as being what its name implies. It will be interesting to see, now that Mr. Green has urged all A. F. of L. units to cease contributing money to the league, as not in the "true interest of labor," how much he can affect its financial stability. Usually, the potency of associations such as the league is in exact ratio to the size of its collections.



Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Pictures are getting dirtier at the same time they are getting cleaner, for the movie bath seems to be going out.

Right away you'll think of half a dozen baths you've seen in recent pictures to disprove that statement, but it's true nevertheless. The bath is in disfavor, the rub-a-dub-scrub cycle has waned.

Marlene Dietrich bathed beautifully in "Knight Without Armor," and Judy Canova in "Artists and Models" The very first scene of "Paradise For Three" has a young lady bathing in a show-window—and discreet showers pop up now and then to remind of the old days of bathing glory. For all that, the bathtub scene is passing from the screen.

And the film "purity code" has had little or nothing to do with the decline. For many years screen baths have been kept within the bounds of propriety, the bather being fully clad in a bathing suit under the soapsuds—and in a large drying towel when stepping out of them.

It's merely that directors prefer to dodge the obvious difficulties that beset the movie bath. Plumbing has to be brought to the set, property men have to heat great quantities of water (for the bath itself and probably for retakes). The cameraman has his troubles with light refracted from the water's surface, and the water must be made opaque regardless to conceal that portion of the bather under water and inside the bathing suit. There's a lot of bother and fuss, as evidenced in the bath taken by a young lady the other day for "Fools For Scandal," the Carole Lombard-Fernand Gravet movie.

This bath's heroine is Lorraine Eddy MacLean, who answers a telephone while taking it. She is completely hidden, bathing suit and all, under great piles of bubbles. The prop men have to blow the bubbles—before the player gets in the tub. Property men feel very silly, standing around blowing bubbles, and they grown men and all.

Kay Francis took a shower for a movie once—behind opaque glass with only her head showing through round holes in the shower walls. She too wore a bathing suit—a white one that became invisible behind frosted glass.

All that is left of last night's trade talks is stale odor of cigars, job for the charwomen.

NEW YORK—All day long and far into the night, National league managers bickered and haggled over various player deals at the annual schedule meeting yesterday, but this morning all that was left was the stale odor of abandoned cigars and a job for the charwomen. Bill Terry tried to peddle his top hand catcher, Gus Mancuso, to the Cincinnati Reds, the Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals but in each case it was cocked-dice just when Wilyam, one of our secret admirers, thought he had a natural.

The thing was like the strip-tease, always threatening to come off but never quite making it.

As a result Wilyam was reported as leaving for his Memphis home, full of chagrin and unrequited oratory. The last thing he said was that the Reds, Cards and Dodgers need a catcher and ultimately would have to come to him. But one wonders whether he hasn't got that a little mixed up.

ONE wonders, in fact, whether in the end he won't have to go to them. He has cut Mancuso's salary. He has offered him publicly to everybody, except Peoria, and, having gone that far out on a limb with an employe, there's really nothing further to do except leave him there.

For a time yesterday, it seemed that Mancuso might wind up in Cincinnati with Outfielder Wally Berger. But McKechnie and Warren Giles finally decided that the asking-price was too high, since it involved not only Catcher Ernie Lombardi but two juveniles, Catcher Dee Moore and Outfielder Harry Craft. The latter hit .358 last year with Waterloo in the Three-I league; .311 with Syracuse, .312 with the Reds in a dozen games and might be the answer to a manager's prayer.

In any case, Wilyam's interest in the young man was sufficient to warn the Reds off, especially since Mancuso and Berger are a couple of gaffers who right soon will be very handy around the house of a Christmas eve. They're getting old enough to double for Santa Claus.

FRANKIE FRISCH also shied away from Terry's offer of Mancuso for Outfielder-Infielder Bordagaray and Catcher Herb Bremer, although the former is a refugee from Brooklyn, a none too subtle form of criticism, and the latter is practically unknown. But Mancuso was a second-stringer in St. Louis six years ago and maybe it wouldn't look so good, bringing him back now.

At a late hour last night, the Dodgers were said to be in the throes of a deal with the Philadelphia club, looking toward the acquisition of First Baseman Dolph Camilli. There's nothing to be said against an idea like that, except maybe by the Philadelphia club.

WARMING UP FOR CRACK AT EACH OTHER

In case you think we mean Jim Braddock and Jack Dempsey, you are mistaken. Jim and Jack are merely showing Bob Tow and Red Burman, their hopefuls, what this fightin' game's all about. Bob (left) and Red meet in New York tonight.

CHAMPIONS PACE PACK

Hamilton and Upper Arlington Remain Undefeated In Cage Races.

By FRITZ HOWELL

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

COLUMBUS—Hamilton's Class A champions and Upper Arlington's Class B kings paced the pack today into the February lap of the race to the 1938 Ohio high school basketball titles, each racking up two victories last week to keep their records clean for the season.

Hamilton, unbeaten in 12 straight, ran its two-year string to 39 by defeating Springfield 41 to 21 and Dayton Roosevelt 20 to 17.

Runs String to Nine.

Upper Arlington raced through Hilliards and Grandview to run its streak to nine. Grandview, the only team to beat the Golden Bears a year ago, has been knocked over twice this season by Arlington.

Akron Buchtel fell out of the Class A unbeaten list as it bowed to Akron Garfield 38 to 26, but the week's big surprise was Canton McKinley's defeat at the hands of East Liverpool, 34 to 32. It was the second setback in 10 starts for the Bulldogs, only team to snatch a victory over Massillon's powerhouse this year.

Carl Fiore, the Canton high-scorer who won Canton's first two games in the state tourney in 1937 with last-minute field goals, was on the sidelines with a case of mumps, while two other Bulldog regulars were out because of ineligibility

Faces Tough Week.

Massillon, winner of eight out of nine games, and finalist in the 1937 state meet, faces a tough week as it stacks up against unbeaten Salem and the tough East Liverpool quintets this week.

Tygers Drop Six Points In Litkenhouse Ratings.

The stock of the Mansfield high school cagers took a six-point drop in Dr. E. K. Litkenhouse's Ohio ratings released today. The Tygers are listed at 78.5, which keeps the club in the top bracket of the ratings.

Ratings of other teams in the vicinity follow: Marion, 74.7; Mt. Vernon, 68.7; Galion, 62.9; Bucyrus, 57.4; Willard, 57.3; Shelby, 48.2; Ashland, 47.4; Akron West, which meets the Tygers here Friday, is listed at 83.8. Massillon holds the lead again this week with a rating of 95.8.

First Christian continued to cling onto third place by turning back B'Nai Jacob, 49 to 6, with Schuster leading the Christian offense with 20 points.

In the other tilts, St. John's defeated First Presbyterian, 25 to 9, and Mayflower drubbed South Main, 34 to 14.

ADDS 34th KNOCKOUT

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Henry Armstrong, world's featherweight champion, knocked out Chalky Wright, his 34th kayo victim, in one minute, 10 seconds of the third round last night.

Boy Who Made Debut Here Reaches Semi-Finals.

Jim Brinkman of Bucyrus, who made his fistic debut in a Mansfield ring three years ago, is making a strong bid for the middleweight championship in the Golden Gloves tournament now in progress in Cleveland.

Brinkman, who has reached the semi-finals, won his first three fights via the knockout route. He is scheduled to make his semi-final appearance Thursday.

INMATES WIN, 49-34

Score Easy Victory Over Ashland at Reformatory.

The Inmates of the Ohio State Reformatory romped to an easy 49 to 34 victory over the Ashland Orioles at the Reformatory last night.

With Bill Moore and Bill Calhoun leading the way, the Reformatory club had an easy time of it after securing an early lead. At halftime the Inmates led, 21 to 13. Moore dumped in 18 points to set the individual pace for the evening and Calhoun scored 14. P. Harmon led Ashland with 12.

O'CONNOR, WHITE TOP 'LADIES NIGHT' CARD SCHEDULED AT ARMORY TONIGHT

HEADED by the meeting between Dan O'Connor and Ed "Strangler" White, and the observance of the first "Ladies' night" in many moons, the Quality club's weekly mat card lines up as one of the best presented in the Armory in a long time. The program is scheduled at 8:30.

O'Connor, title-bound red-head from Boston, will be tested severely by the rough White, who attempts everything short of murder to gain victories. They will meet for the two best out of three falls with a time limit of 90 minutes.

O'Connor, perhaps, has not met a more vicious adversary and his showing will be watched with interest.

The semi-final between Babe Kasaboski and Sterling Davis should be another thriller. The popular Pole, has evidently let himself in for a bit more than a quiet evening, for Davis' wrestling can include anything from a bomb to a carving knife.

The opener brings together the colorful Dutch Schultz of Milwaukee and Ira Shota of Pittsburgh.

Ladies will be admitted free if accompanied by an escort.

STOP REICHERT, HUFFMAN, METHODIST CAGERS TOLD

First Lutheran Stars Threaten Leader's Undefeated Record at Y Tonight.

STOP Reichert and Huffman," the members of the undefeated First M. E. church were instructed today by their coach.

Reichert and Huffman are members of the First Lutheran club, which meets the front-running Methodists in the feature game on tonight's Class A. Church league program at the Y. M. C. A.

The two stars are not only running one, two in the individual scoring race, but the Lutheran team is only a notch behind the Methodists in the title race.

A defeat for the Methodists tonight would not knock them out of first place, but it would tighten the race sufficiently to make it an open affair.

Reichert paces the Church league scorers with 87 points, and Huffman in only one point in the rear.

The Lutheran and Methodist teams vie at 8:30, and the tilt follows games between Park Avenue Baptist and Central M. E. and Episcopal and Mayflower. Temple Emanuel meets St. Johns and St. Paul tackles United Presbyterian in the other tilts.

The individual scoring follows:

	FG	FT	TP
Reichart, Lutherans	37	13	87
Huffman, Lutherans	39	8	86
Boyd, Episcopal	39	6	84
Botzer, Mayflower	33	12	78

Joe Rejects $25,000, Returns to 'Frisco.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Joe DiMaggio stepped onto the stage today as baseball's No. 1 holdout. He was en route to his San Francisco home after rejecting an offer of $25,000 to play center field for the New York Yankees in 1938.

"I wanted $40,000," said DiMaggio before departing, "if the club had offered me $30,000 before I left I would have signed. But they didn't, so I guess the next move is up to them."

KIKI TO JOIN DODGERS

Cuyler To Go South With Brooklyn For Spring Tryout.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler may be playing the outfield for the Brooklyn Dodgers this summer. Larry MacPhail, executive vice-president of the club, announces that Cuyler, a free agent, had applied for a job and would go south with the Dodgers.

Cuyler's indifferent season with the Reds last year is blamed on injuries he received in spring training. Cuyler informed MacPhail he has entirely recovered from the injury and was confident he would show the speed and hitting he displayed in 1936 when his average was .326.

RANDOM SHOTS

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sport Editor.

MANY remedies have been suggested for what has been termed defects in the present basketball rules While the elimination of the center jump is responsible for the speedier game the coaches protesting against the current rules do not seek the return of the tip, but recommend other changes which will slacken the pace of play.

A Cleveland educator advocates additional rest periods Under his plan, a game would be played in eight quarters instead of four, a minute rest period being offered every four minutes.

The 10 seconds rule should be abolished, a Toledo coach believes. "It seems too much to expect the offensive team to advance the ball immediately past the center line," he contends.

THE CANTON Lehman coach seeks the abolition of all foul shooting He would substitute the penalty box, such as they use in hockey. All fouls committed in back court would be penalized by awarding the team fouled the ball out of bounds Front court fouls would result in players spending 30 seconds to one minute in the penalty box.

Dr James Naismith the inventor of the game, also has suggestions to improve the game. He advocates the raising of baskets from the regulatory height of 10 feet to eliminate roughness under the goal. He also favors a return of the center jump. He feels the center jump was one of the essential parts of the game.

Perhaps all of these recommendations deserve consideration, but since the faster game has proven more popular, we feel a change to slow it up might prove fatal to the sport's popularity.

If the game is too fast, and injurious to the health of the participants, as many of the coaches contend, then why not adopt the hockey method of substitution? In the ice game, teams are permitted to substitute every two or three minutes, entire lineups if necessary. Such a rule would at least eliminate the criticism that the new game is harmful to competitors.

HOWEVER, we believe, as does Dutch Dehnert of the New York Celtics, that the new rules to speed up the game will defeat their own purpose eventually.

"Abolishing the center jump," Dehnert says "may serve the purpose for a time, but, once teams get used to it, they will fit the offense to the new trend and eventually, make the game much slower than before."

You probably remember the same criticism was heard when the 10 second rule was approved to halt stalling The teams adanted themselves to the change the same as they probably will to the new rules.

RISKO MAY NEVER ENTER RING AGAIN UNLESS HE GETS SHOT AT CONTENDER

By GEORGE E. MOISE

(International News Service Sports Writer)

CLEVELAND—That eminent gas station proprietor and pugilistic spoiler, John Risko, now enjoying the pleasant Miami weather, may never fight again if he can't get a bout with another top-notch heavyweight.

Take the word of Danny Dunn, formerly of Mansfield, who has been Johnny's manager, mentor, guide and banker for 15 years, since way back in the amateur days, when Johnny boasted a killing right and not much boxing science

"I could get him lots of fights," Danny said today. "But he won't fight any of these guys but Louis, Braddock or Farr."

And Jim Braddock has announced his retirement, so that leaves Farr and Louis. Louis once was lined up, but an injury to Risko forced a substitution. A Farr-Risko fight has been mentioned, but the report has been taken with a grain of salt. According to Dunn, however, such a match is a distinct possibility

"I may know tomorrow or the next day about that fight," said Danny. He has corresponded with Mike Jacobs on the subject, and a fight may definitely develop almost any time, he said.

"It would be a good fight," said Dunn, "but Johnny would lick Farr."

Risko has made two public appearances in recent months. He won a deserved decision over Bob Olin, and dropped a fight to John Henry Lewis. Loss of the Lewis fight, Dunn said, was due to over training on the part of the 35-year-old Risko.

Invades Ashland

Mansfield High Quint Seeks Second Victory Over A's Tonight.

VICTORIOUS in seven of their 12 games, the Tygers of Mansfield high encounter No. 13 tonight when they invade Ashland to complete a home-and-home series.

The Tygers may not be superstitious, but it is the general belief that they will find another tough assignment awaiting them on the Ashland court.

Troublesome At Home.

The A's have always been difficult for Coach Russ Murphy's men on the Ashland floor, and tonight is not expected to be an exception.

Coach John Longley has developed a strong ball club out of the inexperienced material he had available at the start of the season, and his patience in working with the cagers is now paying dividends.

Ashland showed exceptional improvement last week as it dropped a two-point decision to the crack Bucyrus quintet. The A's staged a sensational rally in the fourth period only to fall a basket short of knotting the count.

Snook and Barr were the A's who were particularly brilliant in the Bucyrus game, and they will demand special attention from the Mansfield defense tonight.

Smith and Witt will probably hold down the forward posts tonight, with Snook at center, and Barr and Glasener at the guards.

Changes Unlikely.

While Murphy has been using the reserves freely in the varsity lineup in preparations for Ashland, it is expected that the usual lineup of Dugger and Scott, forwards; Dials, center, and Hallabrin and Lyons will start the game.

Tartleton Win Streak Stopped at 84 Games.

STEPHENVILLE, Tex.—(AP)—The Plowboys of John Tarleton junior college relaxed today, their streak of 84 consecutive basketball victories broken by the San Angelo junior college Rams, 27-26, at San Angelo.

The defeat was an answer to Coach W. J. Wisdom's prayer: "If I could get this eternal pressure off the boys they would turn in a good game; they are so nervous they miss 80 to 90 percent of the crip shots."

Ohio U. Gains Second Place

Avenges Early Season Loss From Cincinnati.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Ohio university rode high in second place in the Buckeye conference basketball race today after a 40-35 victory over the University of Cincinnati at Athens last night. It was sweet revenge for the Bobcats, who had absorbed an early-season licking from the Bearcats.

Wittenberg copped its fourth straight Ohio conference game and shoved Denison deeper into the league cellar with a 62-32 victory over the Big Red. It was Denison's sixth straight loss in as many conference games.

Miami university staged a late scoring burst to edge Wilmington college, 32-29, after Wilmington had led most of the way. Mt. Union trimmed Hiram, 40-28, and Xavier took Akron into camp, 35-29, in other games last night.

SUSPENDS OWENS' TEAM

A. A. U. Reveals Players Violated Rule on Length of Tour.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Amateur Athletic union today had suspended "Jesse Owens' Olympians" en masse because, said Floyd A. Rowe, northeastern Ohio A. A. U. secretary, "of an A. A. U. rule that amateur teams cannot go on tour for more than 21 days. The Olympians' 21-day leave expired last week-end."

MIKE, FARR ON 'OUTS'

By EDDIE BRIETZ

(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK—Mike Jacobs and Tommy Farr are not "just lik that" any more . . reason is Tommy's point blank refusal to brawl with Max Baer. . . . The New York boxing commission has refused to let Tony Galento pose for any more pictures showing him smoking a cigar or drinking a glass of beer . . . which will just about play the devil with Tony's training program. . . . North Carolina sports editors are wiring in wanting to know what is "brewing at Duke" . . . You'll find out in two or three years, boys. . . .

About the only item of interest the National league meeting produced was the fact that Judge Landis and Larry McPhail, who have been at loggerheads more than once, have made up and have a date to play golf in Florida March 11 . . . Bill Brandt, press agent for the league, celebrated the occsion by issuing his annual "Green Book" which is just about the classiest effort Bill has ever turned out. . . Burleigh Grimes told all within hearing that he learned more about baseball in one year under John McGraw than in 14 years of pitching on other National league clubs.

Collide Tonight

Canzols, Pure Oils and Elks, Westies Meet Tonight at Mansfield High.

BASKETEERS of the hapless Mack Pure Oils will endeavor to chalk up their first City Class A league victory of the season at 7:30 tonight by clashing with the Ira D. King Canzols in the opening tilt on the two game series on the Mansfield high planks.

In this feature attraction on tonight's card, the smooth-working Elks club tackles the Westinghouse combine.

Best Performance.

The Oilmen turned in their best performance in their opening game early in the season when they dropped a 37-33 thiller to the Westinghouse Electrics, but since then have been unable to function. The last skirmish between the Oils and Canzols ended in a seven-point victory for the latter combine.

Chances of a Pure Oil triumph tonight are remote, but the club, led by the sharpshooting Harold Boliantz, will probably tax the Canzols to the limit.

With the addition of new playing material in the past two weeks, Fred Buzard's aggregation

NEWSPAPER ARCHIVE®

By Henry McLemore

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

EL PASO, Tex.—The speedometer on my car reads 13,437 today, and I propose to tell you of the various types of drivers I have encountered in accumulating that mileage since I left New York nearly four months ago.

My observations were made in 25 states, and over a trail that wound haphazardly from New York into the south, then to the middle-west, the far-west and finally to Texas.

Just as each section of the country has its own peculiarities in accent, so does it have its own type of automobile driver.

Take the south, for example. The southern driver is of what I have termed the "historical" type. Put a southerner back of the wheel and the moment his foot touches the accelerator he imagines that he is General Pickett at Gettysburg and starts charging.

He is very closely allied in type to the mid-western driver, the only difference being that the southerner does his charging down the main highways while the mid-westerner prefers to gain momentum on the side roads and be at top speed when he roars full tilt on to the road that has the right of way.

MY KNOWLEDGE of California drivers is based chiefly on the habits of Hollywood automobile owners, and they are a race apart.

The Hollywood driver relies on blind faith in his fellow man. When a Hollywoodian steps into his car he points its nose in the general direction of where he is going, releases the brake, slams the accelerator to the floorboard, and then closes his eyes. What happens after that depends entirely on the behavior of the drivers of the cars coming toward him.

has developed into a dangerous scoring machine. Although it has yet to score a second-round victory, it will enter tonight's melee as favorites.

Buzard has secured the services of Fritz Gottfried, Bob DeHaven and Bill Supon, a former Crestline hi h ace. The latter two are expected to wear the Canzol livery for the first time against the Pure Oils.

Game Holds Interest.

Considerable interest is evident in feature tilt as the Westies' title ambitions depend partly on the outcome of the game. Vern Jones' team at present is riding along in first place with the powerful Yuncker Sports five with two victories against no defeats.

A defeat by the Elks would drop the Electrics a half-game behind the leaders, who would have to beat the Yuncker team next week in the final game of the second round in order to share the title.

Farr's Refusal to Meet Baer Opens Chance For Detroiter.

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Tommy Farr's obstinate refusal of Max Baer as his next ring opponent projected a new name today into the muddled heavyweight situation.

It was that of young Jimmy Adamick, Detroit's knockout specialist, who will be offered a bout with Baer here March 11. If he can beat Baer, Promotor Mike Jacobs will throw him in against Joe Louis in the champion's second "tune-up" bout, sometime in April.

BUCK SELLING SENTIMENT IN SLOW TRADING

Stocks Find Little Encouragement In Overnight News Developments.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Stocks bucked selling sentiment today and many leaders titled backward.

Building material issues provided virtually the only resistant division, stimulated by the senate's passage yesetrday of the housing bill.

The trade pace was slow and the ticker tape frequently was motionless.

Bonds tended a little higher. Foreign markets were mixed. Price changes were irregular among leading commodities.

Overnight news developments were not particularly cheering to the board room fraternity.

"Iron Age" reported few steel buyers were adding to their inventories pending wage negotiations between U. S. Steel subsidiaries and the SWOC next week, and their consequent possible effect on prices. On the other hand the publication pointed out government work "looms large" in the construction field in the near future.

Electric power output for the week ended Jan. 29 declined more than seasonally expected to anew low for 1937-38, the Edison Electric Institute disclosed. In the same period gasoline stocks gained 2,059,000 barrels, reflecting diminished consumption.

NEW DISSENSION

A. F. of L., CIO Take Opposing Views on Wagner Act.

MIAMI, Fla. — (AP) — Another major split between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization developed today over a proposal to amend the Wagner labor relations act.

The AFL executive council endorsed a change that would insure the members of craft unions within an industry the right to elect their own representatives for collective bargaining.

The United Mine Workers, of which John L. Lewis is president, voted unanimously at their Washington convention yesterday to oppose any change in the act.

John P. Frey, president of the AFL metal trades department who raised the matter, said that in some elections held by the labor board the form of the ballot was such that employes had to vote either for or against the CIO with no opportunity to choose an AFL craft union for bargaining representative.

PUPILS SIGN UP

Simpson Holds Registration For Extra Activities.

Registration day was held at John Simpson Junior high school today as students signed up for the extra curricular activities they wish to take part in during the last semester of the school year.

Students have 18 different activities in which they may participate, according to H. J. Dotson, principal. These activities include the band, orchestra, boys' and girls' glee clubs, and The John Simpson Times.

During the first semester, about 600 took part in the different activities, or about half of the total enrollment at the school.

Cupid On Holiday, License Report For Month Shows

Maybe it was the business recession or just the weather, but Cupid apparently dropped his arrows and went on a vacation in Richland county last month.

Only 24 marriage applications were handled in county probate court, a check of the records showed today. At that rate the licenses for the year will drop far below the 482 issued in 1937.

Most of the applications recorded in January were received during the first half of the month, only two being filed in the final week.

Records show that fewer licenses are issued during the winter months, however, with May, June and July usually the top months.

Last year 48 were issued in May and 67 in June to boost the year's total to 44 more than were issued in 1936.

SHARP DECLINE

Business Review Reports On Ohio Employment For March.

CLEVELAND —(INS)—Sharp employment drops and lowered payrolls marked the first month of 1938, the Monthly Business Review of the Fourth District Federal Reserve Bank stated today.

This recession was in notable contrast with last year at the same time, when, despite the strike of "little steel" and the ravaging Ohio floods, industry was operating at near-capacity to meet unfilled orders and build up inventory.

names public, it was learned that they were "long termers" who had been called in the hope that any "grievances" they might have would open new "leads" in the investigation.

Jenkins, whose testimony was expected to be heard this afternoon, has been connected with Ohio penal institutions since 1905, when he came to the reformatory as a guard and instructor. He became assistant superintendent in 1913, and in 1918 was made superintendent.

He held that post until 1935, when he was transferred to London prison farm by Governor Martin L. Davey, and was succeeded here by Glattke.

FINANCE RELIEF FOR 6 MONTHS

Wolfe Gets State Auditor's OK on Plan That Sets Up $8,250 a Month.

from the state, which was received last week as the final distribution of relief bond retirement funds, was set up as a matching fund to cover the six-month period, Wolfe said.

During that time the county will get about $5,500 monthly from the state auditor under the recently enacted state relief bill, with half of that amount to be put up monthly by the county, bringing the total to $8,250.

"The arrangement will help us over the worst time of the year so far as relief is concerned," Wolfe explained, "but unless the anticipated drop in expenses comes with warmer weather, the county will be unable to cope with the problem."

After certifying its $18,000 allocation to the state auditor for matching purposes, the county today spent more than $14,000 to pay December bills. Checks were ready for distribution today, Wolfe said.

Payment of the December bills leaves a debt of nearly $18,000 for January direct relief expenses, but county officials were expecting the first monthly allocation from the state by Feb. 10 and that will be used to help retire the debt, Wolfe declared.

Approximately 5,000 persons are receiving direct relief aid in the county at present, as compared with less than one third of that number last summer, the records show.

of installing them as a source of revenue to the city.

He said the state law prohibited the city from buying the meters, but added that they could be leased on a percentage basis with the city guaranteed a 25 per cent profit. He said the average income from a meter in other cities was approximately $10 per month.

A representative of the Martin Timing Devices company of Springfield, Mass., also exhibited a meter of similar design and construction.

Nazi Leader Quits, Germans Refer To 'Simpson Affair'

BERLIN— (AP) —Marshal Werner Von Blomberg, minister of war, handed his resignation to Reichsfuehrer Hitler before going to Capri on his honeymoon, a highly reliable informant disclosed today.

There had been indications the officers' corps of the army was not pleased by marriage of the 59-year-old marshal to Erika Grohn on Jan. 12, and this was followed by the reports he would relinquish his post.

Von Blomberg retains the title of field marshal, there being no retirement for that rank. Field marshals remain active for life.

Germans who have been aware that the war minister's resignation was impending referred to it as another "Wallis Simpson affair"—referring to the decision of former King Edward VIII of England to abdicate rather than give up the woman of his choice.

They said that Von Blomberg remarked:

"Well, I love her, and I would rather give up my job than leave her."

The 59-year-old field marshal's bride is 28 and the daughter of a carpenter. The marriage ceremony was performed secretly.

JUDGE 'SPANKS' CONNIE BENNETT

She's Just a 'Garden Variety' Witness Not Star In Court, Jurist Tells Her.

(By International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—In a courtroom Constance Bennett must leave histronics at home and remain just a common, ordinary garden-variety witness. All she can do is sit and look beautiful.

That was the verbal spanking the blond star received from Superior Court Judge Charles S. Burnell.

Miss Bennett was in court to prosecute her $65,000 suit against Gaumont-British Picture corporation for breach of contract.

She became a little too quick on the trigger with her answers. Judge Burnell interrupted with:

"You are not here as a picture star. You're just here as the common, ordinary garden-variety witness. Just sit there and look beautiful."

Miss Bennett smilingly replied: "I'll try, your honor."

The star claims she signed a contract with the British concern in 1935 to make two pictures in 1936, and alleged she only received $35,000 of the $55,000 promised her on the first picture, while she was not called on to make the second picture as outlined in the contract.

Attorneys for Gaumont-British claimed the actress had broken her contract by working for Twentieth Century-Fox.

200 INDIGENT CHILDREN GET AID IN COUNTY

New Office Set Up at Courthouse For County Program Under Security Act.

A new office for the administration of Richland county's $30,000 program for dependent children and needy blind had been established today on the top floor of the courthouse.

Under the county set-up, which is supervised by Miss Mildred Armstrong, former county relief director, more than 200 indigent children under 18 years old and 21 blind persons are receiving monthly allowances from the federal, state and county governments.

Funds From 3 Sources.

Federal funds are provided under the Social Security act and are matched by appropriations from the state and county.

County cases, investigated by Miss Armstrong and Mrs. Katherine McMichael, county visitor for the department of public welfare, must receive final approval of the county board of public assistance. The board is headed by C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board of county commissioners.

The county appropriated $15,000 for the program this year, with a similar amount to come from the state and federal governments in quarterly allocations.

Miss Armstrong has supervised the program for the past several months in connection with her work as relief director. Her office formerly was at the county relief headquarters, 28 Orange street.

INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 9

Who Is the Head of a Family.

A taxpayer, though single, who supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage, or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependent individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation, is the head of a family and entitled to the same exemption allowed a married person—$2,500. Also he may claim a $400 credit for each dependent, if such dependent person is under 18 years of age or is by reason of advanced age or poor health (mental or physical) incapable of self-support. For example, a widower who supports in one household an aged mother and a daughter 17 years old is entitled to an exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family plus a credit of $400 for each dependent, a total of $3,300. The $400 credit, however, does not apply to the wife or husband of a taxpayer, though one may be totally dependent upon the other.

Several factors are involved in determining whether a person who files a return as the head of a family is to be thus classified. The element of either legal or financial dependency must exist. A taxpayer who supports in his home minor children over whom he exercises family control is classified as the head of a family, even though the children may have an income of their own sufficient for their maintenance. If he does not support them, by reason of their own income, but does exercise family control, he cannot be classified as the head of a family.

If an individual supported is an adults and there rests upon the taxpayer a moral or legal obligation to provide a home and care for such individual, the exemption as the head of a family is allowed, provided the individual is financially dependent. If the individual is not financially dependent, the exemption, even though the taxpayer maintains the common home and furnishes the chief support, does not apply.

For income-tax purpose there can be only one head of a family, and the exemption cannot be divided. Not infrequently claims for the $2,500 exemption are received from two or more members of a family.

It should be remembered that a single person, whether or not the head of a family, is required to file a return if his or her net income for 1937 was $1,000 or more, regardless of whether the return is nontaxable by reason of the $2,500 exemption.

GIRLS COMPETE

10 From Rural Schools Take Part In D. A. R. Contest.

Ten Richland county girls, a senior from each of the rural high schools in the county, will be afforded an opportunity to compete for an all-expense tour to Washington, D. C., in a contest sponsored by the state chapter of the Daughters of American Revolution, according to Boyd Robinson, county superintendent of schools.

The contestants, to be selected by the rural high school superintendents, will take a citizenship examination at 9:30 a. m. Saturday in the county schools office at the courthouse. The test, covering history, current events and social science topics, will be given over a period of one hour and 15 minutes.

Papers will be sent in to the state department of education for grading and the winner will be announced late this month, it was said.

Besides the trip to the national capital, the five runners-up in the state will be entertained in Columbus for two days by the Ohio D. A. R. chapter.

CHAPTER XVIII

"I tried to, but he had gone—to Duluth. Another of his lectures to some mining bunch. It was a crazy notion, but I decided to trail him. I've been trying to contact him. It was a chance in a million, but if I could sell him on that Consolidation stuff, for a good block, it would give me a breathing spell. I really couldn't afford the trip, but it seemed like a hunch. Usually, they're good."

"Of course. What happened?"

"I was in the lobby of his hotel when he strolled in. Of course I registered great surprise, gave him the old-time line and intimated that I was there to meet some chaps who were promoting a deal in Western copper. He was friendly enough — even asked me to have dinner with him. You know, this time, we had something of a common interest. Since that night at Nick's."

"Dad, you mean," Gerta prompted in a low voice. Terry was staring straight ahead of him.

"Well, it gave us something to talk about, at least. I think Dad must have made rather a decided hit with him. He asked me a lot about her, about me, too—as a compatriot of hers. Seemed to put me on a good footing and gave me the opening I wanted. He did listen to all I had to say."

"Was that all he did?"

"Except to hand me the usual line. It sounded good, but he'd want to look into it a bit. He has his own brokers who seem to have a pretty good stand-in when it comes to handling his surplus funds. I gather that he doesn't like to be bothered with such matters. Must be very nice. However, it may not have been time and money wasted — or it wouldn't have been, if things had been breaking for me. He was decent to the point of asking me to look him up again after we got home. No great enthusiasm, though."

"I don't want to worry you, Terry, any more than I have to. But I wish you'd tell me if—is it pretty bad?"

"Very bad."

"Dangerously?"

"Might be."

"But, Terry! There must be someone — I'm thinking about you, dear. Not me. Wouldn't Nick do something for you—just to tide over?"

Terry shifted uncomfortably in in his chair.

"Well, between you and me, I did feel him out, before I went away. Hated it like the devil. And I couldn't make any headway with him at all. I don't know whether he was drunk or plain cagey. He wouldn't talk sensibly. That's out. Look as if I was washed up—or worse."

"But what could be worse, Terry? I'm frightened. I never saw you look so dreadfully..." Gerta's voice broke and the tears gathered in the dark eyes gazing up into Terry's face.

Instead of replying at once, he gently moved her arm from his knee, reached for the whisky bottle and poured himself a drink. He held his glass to the light and squinted at the amber liquid thoughtfully. He smiled slightly, but there was a reckless light in his gray eyes.

"Since you insist, Mrs. Greenway," he said slowly, with a half mocking inflection, "I'll tell you. There's more than a remote possibility that your boy friend might be—on the inside looking out."

A suppressed cry escaped from Gerta Greenwood's quivering lips as the import of Terry's jocular verdict dawned upon her. He meant prison! But she couldn't bring herself to say the word. Couldn't

"You don't mean that, Terry!" she managed brokenly. "You're only trying to frighten me—tell me so!"

"Wish I were," he conceded gloomily. "But that's the answer."

"Oh, Terry, it isn't—it can't be! I know there are plenty of men who conduct business the way you do—take the same chances. And nothing ever happens to them, does it?"

"Maybe not. But I wish you could convince the Benson outfit. They have set a pretty definite limit. Then it's action and—anything."

"I couldn't bear that!" Gerta half sobbed. Her dark head went down on the arm of Terry's chair. "Before that . . ." she choked, "I'd rather see you go away . . . while there's a chance . . ."

His hand came out with a quick movement and touched her soft hair caressingly.

"So you, too, would make a heel out of me?"

"Too?" Gerta raised her tear-wet eyes. "What do you mean?"

"Nothing. I don't want to go into the thing tonight, Gerta. But we may as well get it straight. I've been holding out on the Bensons. Oh, I've done it before—but not for so much. Things broke right in time for me to square accounts This time they haven't. I've gotten in deeper and deeper trying to keep up this cursed 'front.' I had Benson's business, took their money and now I can't deliver. The courts have an ugly word for that sort of thing."

"I know. But that's not—you."

"I'd have said that once. But I don't see anything now . . . And there's nobody to blame but myself."

"Oh, but there is, Terry! All the things you've done—for me. All the time. It's my fault, too! Only tonight, I had been expecting you to help me with that awful bill of Frasers'."

"Skip it," Terry ordered tersely. "That's water over the dam. I'll manage that matter for you—some way. But I'm staying right on here. The Cantines don't run. They take it standing up."

"Yes, I know. But it isn't fair, Terry." Gerta wiped her eyes and tried to smile. "You'll manage somehow, you always have. I'm not going to believe it's so bad as you're trying to make out. Are you sure there isn't anybody—at all?"

"Not a chance. Oh, if it was a little chicken feed, I reckon I could wrangle it. But I'm afraid this thing has leaked a bit. I've been getting the cold shoulder lately in several quarters."

"Oh, you haven't! That's absurd. You've worried until you're beginning to imagine things You've just as many friends as ever, I know it."

"I'd be glad to see them come forward," was the grim retort. 'The line forms on the right."

Gerta attempted to speak lightly. "It's too bad, Terry, that your little friend Dad isn't a rich heiress."

'Yeah, it is."

"Tell me something, Terry You made a remark a few moments ago that sounded—rather odd. Did you tell her about things tonight, after you left here?"

"Hardly!" he answered sharply "What makes you ask that?"

"Just because she has been worrying her head off over you," Gerta answered cooly. "She talked of almost nothing else while she was here . . . so sure that you were in trouble. Naturally, I didn't enlighten her. Besides, I didn't know it was so bad as you insist it is. From the way you spoke, I wondered if she hadn't offered to do something Has she any money?"

"No"

"Are you sure?"

"Plenty sure," Terry answered a trifle impatiently. "Not what we'd call money. She sold out her holdings after he died. The old man was land poor. The home ranch was a fair piece, but that wouldn't mean much these days. Dad probably got enough out of it to keep her for a time."

"But she asked if she might help you ought, didn't she?" Gerta persisted shrewdly.

"She mentioned it," Terry admitted reluctantly.

"But you were too much of a gentleman—you wouldn't let her 'make a heel of you,, either. How much could she let you have?"

"Listen, Gerta! She didn't say and, God knows, I didn't ask her. It was mighty decent of the kid, but of course I'd never listen to it."

"Then I'm not so sure you didn't make a mistake, Terry."

"Please let's drop it" Terry pulled himself to his feet, but Gerta did not stir. She sat with her chin in her cupped palms, staring down at the rug.

"But, Terry, if I had money, you'd accept a lone from me. Wouldn't you?"

"It's likely."

"Just what is the difference. Because I love you and she doesn't?"

"No end of difference. You play my kind of game. Dad doesn't. Good night."

"Good night, dear. Call me tomorrow and tell me how you—how things are. I'll be dreadfully worried until I know." She rose and went swiftly to him. "And you might kiss me. You haven't since you came back" Caradad lay awake far into the night. There was an indefinable fear tugging at her heart, a fear that no satisfactory logic would banish. It was for Terry. Just because he was in financial straits, there was no reason for Gerta to make veiled remarks about Mr. Greenway's tragic end. No one ever could make her think Terry Cantine was like that. There was no lasting disgrace attached to money trouble. Caradad had seen many instances in her own part of the country, heard them discussed freely. Down home, if a man were "licked," he started all over again. If they could, his friends helped him. There was no stigma attached to it unless . . ."

No one could make her believe that Terry wasn't square, either.

Something very puzzling in Gerta's attitude. She had rather gone out of her way, at first, to give the impression that she was nothing more than a good friend of Terry. Later, she had betrayed something more than friendship She was very fond of Terry. Any woman would know that to watch her when Terry was near, to hear her talk when he wasn't. And it was almost apparent that Terry didn't return her regard in equal measure.

Terry's attitude to Caradad was puzzling, too. There was no possible reason, to her way of thinking, why he should have refused help so brusquely. She would have been more than glad to give him a temporary lift, the same as she would have any good friend. And Terry was so much more than a friend. Terry was "folks." That thought somehow always brought a little warmth to her heart. She had no one left—and it was hard to get used to. Terry was almost a brother. His refusal had hurt.

Well, if he wouldn't let anybody help him, she supposed he would have to worry along as best he could. Maybe it would be a lesson to him, if he had been living beyond his means. And she had cause to suspect that was the case. Nothing would happen to him . . . Yet, why did Gerta have to bring that up?

* * *

The whole thing was quite too bad. There was no reason why Caradad Vardell should take it so to heart But she did For, somehow, she felt responsible for Terry. Which was very foolish, probably. Terry didn't want her to feel that way, apparently. One thing was settled She would be in no hurry to leave Chicago now. She was glad she was there and she would remain until she was sure that everything was all right. In an unobtrusive way, she would try to keep an eye on Terry. She didn't like to discuss him or his affairs with Gerta, but, if necessary, she would maintain her contact with Mrs. Greenway. Perhaps she was in Terry's confidence just as much as she claimed to be.

With that resolve, Caradad dismissed her worry to some extent. If Terry should need her, she would be on hand.

For that reason, it was rather an agreeable surprise when John Severence called her the following morning, soon after breakfast.

"Wanted to make sure of finding you in," he explained. "How about that ride we were going to have, Miss Vardell? I'd have taken you up on it sooner, but I've been out of town. As a matter of fact, I returned only this morning."

"I'd like it," she told him promptly.

"This afternoon?"

"Yes."

"Fine. I'll call for you with the car about three, if that suits. I almost forgot to say that you're having dinner with me this time. No excuses—you can dress later. Good-bye."

Caradad put down the telephone with a sense of satisfaction. She had been pretty sure that Severance was in earnest about going riding and—for several reasons—she wished to accept. She liked Severance and it would seem like old times to sit in a saddle. So sure had she been of the invitation that she had been extravagant to the extent of buying a pair of inexpensive jodphurs and a poplin shirt, with a brown four-in-hand tie for it The outfit, in part, was purchased to satisfy a craving of several years. None of her women friends wore "jods." They didn't seem to go with stock saddles. But in pictures, they were very smart-looking and—different.

She would feel rather conspicuous appearing in the lobby wearing the outfit, but, after all . . .

And no one seemed unduly interested or disturbed. Severance, the least of all. His riding breeches were none too immaculate and his boots showed hard service He was bareheaded as usual and looked very interesting, Caradad thought—like a Richard Harding Davis character. The two liveried retainers in the big car looked very grand in contrast, and Caradad found herself wondering if they thoroughly approved of their passengers.

"I've changed our plans a little," Severance confided abruptly, when they were under way. "Too stuffy in the park. I really don't think you'd care for it. We'll run out to a little place I have in the country—only 40 miles or so. My horses have been there all winter anyway. They like it better and so do I. We can take to the fields."

"That does sound better," Caradad agreed.

"Much. And I called up my caretaker's wife and told her we'd be out. I believe I mentioned something about fried chicken and early June peas being your favorites. That's right, isn't it?"

"I forgot to tell you so," Caradad returned seriously. "But thank you just the same for remembering"

"Quite all right." I'm sure. It won't take us long to travel out there, once we shake off the traffic lights. I told Lief to be saddled up—got a gray gelding I think should be up to your weight." He looked down at the small figure beside him with a glint of amusement in his dark eyes. "You look worried," he decided. "I can promise you your mount won't be too skittish"

"I'm not afraid."

"I thought not. I say, Miss Vardell . . ."

"Are you a stickler for proprieties?"

AUDUBON CLUB GIVES GUEST TEA TUESDAY

Mrs. H. C. McCutchan Presents Illustrated Discussion of "Flowers of Ohio"; Dialect Reading, Music Complete Program.

LINKING interior decoration with the study of "Flowers of Ohio" Mrs. H. C. McCutchan gave an illustrated lecture on the program of the guest tea of the Audubon club at the Central Methodist Episcopal church yesterday. Mrs. McCutchan's talk, which included a discussion of the better known flowers of this state, was illustrated with pastel drawings of each of the plants.

In order to tie in the use of nature's color combinations for color schemes in home decorating, Mrs. McCutchan had mounted on each card suggestions for wallpaper, floor coverings, and window hangings suggested by the plant colors.

The talk was divided so that it took up each color group of wild flowers separately so that the audience might see the various possibilities for home decoration. The talk not only gave the characteristics and growing habitats of the various flowers, but also listed one or two outstanding facts about each.

Talks on Dandelion.

Devoting several minutes to the dandelion, Mrs. McCutchan told members and guests of the club that this plant is found in every part of the civilized world. From it she drew an object lesson for man in that she felt this golden flower pointed the true practicality in persevering at whatever one is best fitted for.

The musical part of the program was presented by Mrs. A. C. Butterfield, pianist, and Mrs. Robert Baker, vocalist. Mrs. Butterfield played "A Landscape" by Mana Zucca and "Night Song" by Lily Strickland followed by Mrs. Baker who sang "Joy of the Morning" by Harriet Ware and "Thank God for a Garden" by Del Riego. Mrs. Wallace Campbell gave an original reading in southern dialect.

Presiding at the social meeting in the absence of Mrs. W. R. Hainer, was Mrs. H. N. Keene, vice president, and Mrs. C. M. Lutz, secretary-treasurer Assisting were Mrs. Harry Spandau and Miss Josephine Doolittle. Tea was served at a long table decorated with pink and green tapers and a low bowl of peach carnations and pastel garzia chrysanthemums. Mrs. Nellie K. Snavelly, Wabash, Ind., mother of Mrs. Donald F. Wilson, and Mrs. A. B. Endly poured.

Courtney was hostess and Mrs. John Angle, president, was in charge of the business meeting. Miss Bertha Ruess opened the program with an "Analysis of the Constitution."

Prefacing her talk with a quotation from the psalms, Miss Ruess discussed the heritage of our people. A native of Mansfield, Miss Ruess indicated her pride in being a resident of a country that after 150 years can say "We the people—"

Her principal point was that the United States is a country which still maintains representative government, freedom of religion, speech and the press and one which made liberty the first central ideal of the constitution.

Mrs. Roy McGinty's paper was on "Seven Proud Women." For her talk she considered the seven women who lived to see their sons attain the highest honor the United States offers—the presidency.

Mrs. McGinty pointed that all of these women were worthy of our homage because they played important parts in the lives of their sons but they never indulged in harmful sentimentality.

The women are Mary Bell Washington, Nellie Conway Madison, Jane Knox Polk, Hannah Simpson Grant, Eliza Ballou Garfield, Nancy Allison McKinley, and Sarah Delano Roosevelt.

Nineteen members answered roll call with quotations of famous men. The next meeting will be a Martha Washington tea, Feb. 22, at the home of Mrs. Frank Bloor, 121 West Second street. Have Fun With Mate Adviser Suggests

By VIRGINIA LEE

"Let's forget how married we are" is the very good advice of Norah Smaridge in a little poem published in a New York daily paper.

It is also the sentiment of Clarita de Forceville, in her recent book, "Marriages Are Made at Home." She asserts that it is the sense of fun and companionship in marriage that makes them go.

I have known an elderly couple to go off on a jaunt over the week-end, not quite knowing where they were going to stop, but bent on adventure They came just before dark to Chautauqua, N. Y., and found rooms at a modest hotel—it was after the regular summer season had closed and rates were most reasonable. They rambled all over the place—neither having been there before—and had a grand time.

On their summer vacation this same couple took a short cruise and found that moonlight evenings on deck or dancing at a summer hotel when the boat made a stop-over of a few hours, were wonderful revivals of their long ago honeymoon days.

And at home that sense of fun and companionship can be kept going with little jokes, mild flirtations with each other, "kidding" each other, reading together—and so many other little and not at all sensational things that make life together very pleasant If two people have this comradeship it makes no difference whether they have little of this world's goods or much. A very small, humble house or apartment can be a real home and so can a palace or a castle. It has always seemed to me that it would be very hard to make a real home out of some palatial mansions one sees. They seem more like public buildings, maybe because I never lived in them. But I wager it can be done if two people get a lot of fun out of each other's company, as I have suggested.

Do things together and have fun doing them is the advice of Madame de Forceville, and remember she stresses, that manners for two who are as close as married people "are based on the same fundamental rules of behavior as manners for 20 or 200."

I, A. A. says she has noticed that several people have been writing to the column saying that they see nothing in life to live for, and suggesting suicide.

Then she tells of her experiences with boys, one in particular, whom she had thought "was a dear." She found he was anything but a dear, and concludes "The more I go out with fellows, the more I am convinced I want to be an old maid, so I can thoroughly agree when some of your readers say there isn't anything worth living for. Don't you agree?"

I can't say I do, I A. A. And I bet if death suddenly stared you in the face you'd decide in a hurry that life was worth living after all. You can have an awfully good time being an old maid, you know, and I'd be willing to bet you right now that you won't be.

You seem to have been unfortunate in your boy friends. I persist in believing that boys are not all "like that" In former years men were not held to the same moral code as women, but even then there were many who had high ideals and lived by them—and the same is true today.

Recession Shows Its Silver Lining; Prophets See Drop In Prices of Food

Consumer Dollar Expected to Go Farther Than During 'Boom.'

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Bright spot in the 1938 outlook for the American consumer is the prospect that this year's food dollar will go further than 1937's.

Unusually large foodstuff supplies presage continuation of the current "breathing spell" from mounting food costs. Barring a severe drought, government food supply experts see a trend to a lower general price level. Extent of the decline can be only a guess, but a price level of 6 to 8 per cent below last year is regarded a reasonable estimate.

Between last May, when prices were at the highest level since the spring of 1931, and Dec. 14, when the last official survey was taken, the decline was 4.6 per cent. Since then there has been a break in meat prices, particularly in better grade beef.

Here are some of the factors on which government officials base their unofficial forecast: Potatoes, No. 1 item on the poor man's budget, now 36 per cent below prices of a year ago, probably will continue at that level at least through first half of 1938; oranges are ticketed for the "bargain counter;" seasonal decline of butter prices from the December peak probably will be greater than average; dry edible beans are slated to be cheaper than last year, cereals and bakery products may go somewhat lower; fats and oils are declining in price; rice supplies will exceed any other year on record; total supplies of canned vegetables are indicated to be the largest recorded.

Food prices to Dec. 15, 1937 (solid line), are based on figures of the U. S. Department of Labor from 51 cities. The forecast for 1938 (broken line) is the unofficial consensus of government experts canvassed by the Associated Press.

THEATER

AN agent's suit in Hollywood brings out the fact that Jon Hall, muscular hero of "The Hurricane," playing at the Ohio theater, received only $150 a week salary on the picture. But Hall will tell you that all he actually got was $132 a week Ten per cent of his check went to his agent and the other three dollars a week to pay government taxes. The new Goldwyn star's next option in April will boost his salary only $50 a week.

"Checkers."

The little girl who recently was voted one of the six most popular film stars of today, Jane Withers, graces the silver screen of the Ohio theater, beginning Thursday, in her latest starring vehicle, "Checkers". Supporting Jane are Una Merkel, Stuart Erwin and Marvin Stephens. The film revolves around the story of a race horse who breaks his leg at the finish line of a race, and is saved from destruction by Jane. Erwin, who buys the horse, Jane and Stephens, a jockey, take the animal to the farm where Stuart's friend, Miss Merkel, lives. She allows them to keep the horse there until the broken leg heals, but then orders Stuart to sell it. Financial troubles decide the issue, and Stuart enters the animal in the "big" race in order to win enough money to save the farm.

Newspaper Film.

The background of "No Time To Marry," opening at the Madison theater today, for a two-day run, is the busy offices of a newspaper in a middlewest town. Richard Arlin and Mary Astor are co-starred in the film with Lionel Stander and Virginia Dale in the principal feature roles. The story depicts the hilarious adventures of Arlin, ace reporter, who on his wedding night is summoned by his city editor to locate and buy a goat as a Christmas present for the editor's son. When a girl calls just as the reporter is leaving the office he answers, thinking its Miss Astor, his bride-to-be. He makes a date and meets the girl at a cafe, but she turns out to be a missing heiress, (unknown to Arlen). The two, accompanied by Stander, start out to locate the goat. By the time they buy the animal, its past the wedding hour and Arlin is again in hot water.

Charles Laughton at Majestic.

Charles Laughton, star of "Mutiny on the Bounty," and "Ruggles of Red Gap," heads the cast of the re-issue of "The Private Life of Henry VIII," playing at the Majestic theater. The British actor portrays the interesting life of the famous English king, and his many brides. Robert Donat, star of "18 Steps," and Merle Oberon and Binnie Barnes top the supporting cast. "The Patient in Room 18," with Anne Sheridan and Patric Knowles in the leading roles. The film tells the story of a young detective who happens to be in the middle of a double murder and the theft of a $100,000 worth of radium. Miss Sheridan plays the nurse in the hospital where the crimes take place.

Musical.

Bobby Breen, the youth whom Eddie Cantor started on the road to fame by featuring him on a radio program, is starred in the musical, "Make A Wish," at the Ritz. Much of the story is laid in a boys' summer camp. In the film Basil Rathbone and Ralph Forbes are both in love with the boy's mother. How he straightens out things provides an interesting climax Frieda Inescort and Walter Abel in "Portia on Trial," a story about the ups and downs of a brilliant young woman criminal lawyer, completes the twin bill attraction.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I resolved to keep nothing back from my mother-in-law, to make no reserves in the reasons for employing Miss Whitlock such as I had used when telling the nurse of her proposed assignment.

Mary's grandmother, I told myself, was entitled to the whole truth. So, while Katie brewed fresh coffee, and deftly served us with melon, bacon and eggs, and the little flaky hot biscuits and maple syrup beloved by my epicurean mother-in-law, I went over Dicky's reasons for bringing the nurse into the house the evening before, planning to have her accompany us to the Hotel Lansfield in New York where Mr. Veritzen had reserved a suite for us.

One thing I did minimize, and that was the stress Dicky had laid upon his possible need of me in the city. I made it appear that consideration for my comfort, as well as a desire to have Mary protected during the hours I might have to spend at the farm, were the chief reasons for his insistence upon Miss Whitlock's employment. And I was rewarded when Dicky's mother, who knows her son and his little ways, unsuspectingly refrained from reading between the lines, and accepted my story at its face value.

Praises Dicky.

"Richard is always considerate," she said approvingly, "and in this case I think he is very wise as well." Then she extended her approbation to the pot of coffee which Katie had just brought in, and from which I was pouring.

"There! That's something like coffee!" she said. "You can do it when you want to, Katie," she told the girl severely, "and if ever you dare to bring me stale coffee again, I'll—I'll—"

"Bring another plate of biscuits, Katie," I directed quickly, and Katie fled, while Mother Graham, whom I had assured of Mary's freedom from illness before I began my story, questioned me again concerning her beloved granddaughter.

"You're sure she's all right?" she queried imperiously.

"She's not at all ill," I repeated. "But she's terribly fatigued and emotionally worn out. She took Noel's going pretty hard, although she smiled and cheered him on until he left. But afterward she went into a very paroxysm of tears in my arms before I got her back to bed. I wouldn't think of having her go into the city today, but she's wild to get to work, and Miss Whitlock says work will be the best thing for her."

I purposely gave no hint of Dicky's anxiety to have me go to the city before the morrow, and was glad when she made even no casual reference to his plans, patently focusing all her attention upon Miss Whitlock's verdict.

"I think that nurse is right," she said. "Is Mary asleep now? Would it be all right to see her, or does the nurse want her to be alone?"

Madge Knows Cue.

I knew my cue at that question. I did not know what Miss Whitlock's reaction would be, but I knew that I did not dare deny my doughty mother-in-law entrance to a room which I shortly intended to invade with lists of Mary's belongings for classifying.

"Miss Whitlock wants her to have her breakfast before she does anything eles," I said. "And she insists that Mary stay in bed this forenoon. But I'm sure that after breakfast it will be perfectly all right for you to go up. I'm sure it will do Mary a world of good to have a visit with you. She loves you very dearly, you know."

Mary's grandmother wiped her eyes.

"Yes, indeed, I do know," she said. "The dear child! I'll just go out on the porch and read the morning paper until Mary has finished her breakfast. Ah! Richard, good morning!"

"Good morning, Mother! Ah! there, Madge" he saluted us, while I wondered how I could forestall the query which I foresaw he meant to make, and which I was afraid would turn his mother's curiosity into a channel I had been trying to keep closed.

Method For Gilding Hair Given

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty."

In the days when Rome was in its prime, it was customary for the belles of the patrician classes to gild their tresses by powdering them with gold dust. Our modern coiffure stylists seem to have somewhat the same idea about the value of gold and like metals for giving the coiffure smartness and allure. For in many of the newst hair styles designed for formal wear, gold, silver and many other metallic splashes of color are being used, and they certainly do lend a regal air to the coiffure.

Whether or not the ornateness of the present formal fashions has had anything to do with the origin of these new formal coiffures I cannot rightly say. But at all events it is forecast that the modern belle is going to go in for hair gilding, if she wishes her evening coiffure to look up to the minute.

The gilding, however, must be done subtly and carefully, else the finished effect will appear splotchy and too ornate. The idea is not to look like a tinsel-sprinkled Christmas tree, but to incorporate deft, clever splashes of some metallic coloring in the coiffure.

This idea of adding splashes of metallic coloring to the coiffure for evening wear was recently introduced by a well-known hair stylist. Previously, some women used colored lacquers on their locks for formal occasions, but the effect was too impractical to capture the public fancy.

Now, however, a new method has been devised whereby metallic tints may be brushed from the hair the next morning without any damage to the hair or your wave And since this new method is ever so much more practical, I am inclined to think that it will gain a fair amount of popularity.

Let Beautician Do It.

If you wish to try this new method, the best course is to have the metallic splashes administered by your beautician when you have your hair set. However, if you can't afford to have this done, you can try doing it yourself. First, shampoo your hair and rinse it well Then set it in wide, loose waves, and twist the ends up into flat litle ringlets. The waves and ringlets, of course, should be pinned firmly in place.

After this, mix together the whites of two eggs, a tablespoon of water and two drops of vinegar. Beat it slightly and then pour a little of this into a dish. Add to this enough of your preferred metallic powder to make a fairly thin paste Then, with a fine paint brush, use the mixture to outline your ringlets and waves.

Permit your hair to dry thoroughly after you've administered the colored or metallic splashes. Then, when dry, merely loosen the waves slightly. And the next morning, after the ball is over, all you need do is to brush your hair thoroughly to remove the metallic coloring and fit your hair for daytime wear.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, February 3.

JUDGING BY the lunar transits, this day will unfold many curious and mystifying circumstances, with much to intrigue the mind and demand a very concrete showing of wisdom, calculation and sagacity. Duplicity, fraud and subtle assaults on your well being loom, but you may win out by following the advice of your employers or superiors and by adhering strictly to practical ideas.

If This Is Your Birthday?

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of rather peculiar, mysterious and intriguing adventure, all calling for great wariness, discretion and sagacity.

A child born on this day may have a rather intriguing and subtle makeup, with certain peculiar traits and talents which might be diverted or trained to constructive channels of expression. Its impracticality might be developed in creative art, music, poetry or invention.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

NEVER TOO REMOTE

NO MATTER how remote a certain danger my seem to be, it is worth guarding against. One of these which always may be waiting to ambush a suit declarer is the possibility of a defensive ruff or overruff. For that reason, the hostile trumps should always be dropped before attempting a ruff, if the declarer can afford the try and still have enough left fom any ruffs he requires.

Dealer. East. North-South vulnerable).

South's opening bid on this deal was 1-Spade, West overcalled with 2-Hearts, North bid 3-Clubs, South 3-Spades, North 4-Spades, South five and North six.

Against this contract, the heart K was led by West and won by South with the A. South immediately ruffed a heart and East overruffed. A club was returned and ruffed by West, who led another heart for East to ruff. This enabled East to give West another club ruff

As South had nine trumps, his safest play was to have tried out the trump situation first. The two diamonds would have provided for two of the losing hearts and the extra heart could then have been trumped in the dummy If East covered the club Q with the K, seven could have been made, but if he did not, South could not have missed six.

Tomorrow's Problem.

The heart 4 is led against South's 3-No Trump contract. When the finesse of the club 8 is won with West's K, what readings does South get on the hand when East plays the 5 on the second round of clubs?

Markings, Letters In Today's Mail

By EMILY POST

Dear Mrs. Post: You have stated that when writing to a firm whose personnel might include half a dozen women and one man, it is best to begin the letters Dear Sirs rather than Dear Madams. But what is one to decide when sending a leter to Miss Blank's School? It seems rather incongruous to begin such a letter "Dear Sirs" and yet I have an idea that there must be some men on the board.

Answer: When an organization or a firm is incorporated in the name of a woman you would properly address a letter "Dear Madams."

Dear Mrs Post. When you advise that the most popular present-day marking of silver and linen, even before the wedding actually takes place, is a combination of the bride's maiden and future initials, or simply the initial of her last name-to-be, are you taking into consideration the possibility of divorce? For this reason wouldn't it be better that Mary Smith, who is to become Mary Jones now, but who may become something else later, to stick to the old-fashioned convention and mark everything with S? Perhaps this sounds like the suggestion of a cynic but with divorce as flagrant as it is, I don't see why be should be squeamish about looking at it impersonally in the case of the silver and linen, which does involve considerable money.

Answer. If we have reached the point of taking it for granted that a bride's married initials will probably not last very long, then perhaps the time has come to take one step further and abolish the church marriage ceremony. If it is true that the bride of today takes her vows with the idea that it may be temporary, then she can not possibly mean the solemn promises she makes in church. And such being the case, she would better make her temporary agreement before a magistrate and say no more than "I, Mary, take thee, John, for so long as you may seem pleasing to me!" Oh no! don't let any of us think it has come to that. On the other hand, if anything so trivial as the marking on her silver or linen could encourage her to keep her husband's name, then let her mark it in indelible letters by all means. In other words, let's take every step forward for the stability rather than risk even the shortest step in the direction of complacent dissolution.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1938.

Sometime radio may make its biggest hit by all stations agreeing on a "silent hour."

Now that the groundhog did—or didn't—see its shadow, we can settle down to another six weeks of more or less winter weather.

As a test, several Georgia college students went 100 hours without sleep—but investigation discloses that no sermon was being preached at the time.

Mansfield's Junior Association.

EFFORT to enlist fifty additional members in the Mansfield Junior Association of Commerce deserves interested co-operation and encouragement.

A comparatively new organization, the Junior Association of Commerce, can readily be developed into a considerably larger group of serious-minded, progressive young men capable of doing valuable community work along a number of different lines.

Work of this association has already been along constructive channels and its opportunities for the future are limited only by the intelligence and earnestness of effort which its officers and members carry into their task.

The future of a city is so largely dependent on the younger people, who must undergo training for greater responsibilities, that the value of such an organization as the Junior Association of Commerce can scarcely be overestimated. Those who are eligible should regard membership therein as an opportunity and a privilege.

Never Too Old to Learn.

MADE interesting by the fact that a new course in adult education is soon to be started at Mansfield high school, two items which came to notice on the same day induce thought.

One tells of a "moonlight school" being opened in Letcher county, Kentucky, attended by twenty persons between 50 and 75 years old.

Uncle Andy Couch, 75, one of the pupils, said he wanted to learn to read, write and to calculate his accounts.

"One time it wasn't so important," said Uncle Andy, "but now a person is just not in it unless he's up to the time and's got some education."

The other item tells about Mrs. Jennie F. McGahan, 75, a former school teacher, who has just been awarded a scholarship and will enter Brenau college at Gainesville, Ga., to take a four-year course.

Information regarding Mansfield's course in adult education can be secured from V. H. Oberlander, director.

Christian Endeavor Anniversary.

TODAY marks the fifty-seventh anniversary of the Christian Endeavor society, which made its start in a pastor's study in Portland, Maine, February 2, 1881 as a gathering of ~~about fifty boys and girls~~ interested in self-betterment and religious ideals.

As an interdenominational activity for young people with church affiliation, the Christian Endeavor movement now extends into practically every city and town in the United States and to many places in Canada, with a total membership reaching into millions.

The Christian Endeavor society, and others of like purpose which have followed a similar plan, have served as fine influences in the lives of countless young people by providing an attractive combination of religious and social activities in wholesome surroundings.

The fact that such organizations of young men and women are continuing to grow in membership and influence reflects creditably on today's "younger generation."

Auto License Numbers.

MOTORISTS are finicky about their automobile license numbers. And if anyone thinks the age of superstition is really past, let him consult the people that hand out the license plates. Not only is the number 13 dodged with almost unanimous terror, but combinations which add up to 13 are equally shunned.

This problem alone would be enough to make a license dispenser's job not a happy one, but there are many others. There are the followers of numerology who must have special numbers that are expected to make their lives more harmonious and successful. There are people who want their license numbers to be the same as their house numbers or their telephone numbers or their ages. The lucky numbers of games of chance are much sought after. Then there are the people who want low numbers.

The officials are tolerant and even sympathetic, in spite of the extra trouble caused.

How Much Food Is 'Enough'?

THE NEW YORK Charity Organization Society announced the other day that it was increasing its food grants 4½ per cent. A national study of the dietary needs of children made it plain that families on charity were not getting enough of the right kinds of food. Even with the best possible management of the weekly food allowance the menu would be inadequate.

The increase, however, does not seem very impressive when it is found that, on the new scale, a family of five will have only $8.85 a week for food. It is clear that there still cannot be a full allowance of milk, eggs and fresh vegetables on such a budget.

Another authority, discussing the same problem, says that an $8-a-week food allowance is adequate for a family of four. This does not mean, of course, that life cannot be sustained on $8. It means that the family will have to go without certain foods that build, health, strength, energy and resistance to disease.

Footprints of a prehistoric human have been found in Kentucky limestone—and he was probably much disturbed by the conduct of the younger generation.

As Bugs Baer puts it: "The trouble with business is simple. So are the experts."

"The recessive recrudescence," says an economist, "is pronounced." Pronounced how?

LINE FORMS ON THE RIGHT

Big Armament Program Reverses Earlier Idea

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Something more than a decade ago Washington was agog with plans to insure world peace by limiting international armaments.

Today congress is completely absorbed in consideration of the biggest army and navy program (particularly a naval program) in America's peace-time history, with a view to preserving peace by the UN-limited armament method.

Back in the earlier era, of the 1920's, Congressman Fred Britten of Chicago, was chairman of the representatives' naval affairs committee. Congressman Britten had a reputation as quite a bellicose individual. Nevertheless, he was for armament limitation or outright DIS-armament. His argument was that countries will fight, if they have the equipment to fight with.

At the same juncture, Congressman George Huddleston of Birmingham (Ala.), a mighty good pacifist, could not see much point in disarmament or armament limitation, as a peace policy. His reasoning was that, if countries are quarrelsome, they can fight with as primitive weapons as carving knives; that the all-around lack of up-to-date mutual murder machinery cannot stop them. He favored disarmament, as sound economics, but not as a peace guarantee. To keep folk peaceful, he insisted, they must be educated to FEEL peaceful.

WHICH WAS CORRECT?

Congressmen Britten and Huddleston both are out of office now, but I often think of their contrasting attitudes.

Which one had the better of the discussion?—as developments indicate?

We have had semi-disarmament, as per Congressman Britten's prescription, and the situation is worse than ever, since the World war ended.

We have tried to preach international peace, as advocated by Congressman Huddleston, and that doesn't seem to have worked either.

DEAD!

Under the international bargain with the then Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes presiding, the nations hit on the 5-5-3 treaty (equal 5-5 navies for the United States and Britain; a 3 navy for Japan; 2.5 and 2.5 ratios each for France and Italy.)

John Bull immediately proceeded to flim-flam Uncle Sam on a lot of technicalities concerning caliber of guns and trajectories.

Japan never prentended to stick to the dicker.

Italy ignored it altogether. So has France.

Germany was not in on it. Nor was Russia.

In short, the once much talked-about 5-5-3 pact is as dead as Pharoah.

In past years and (not so long past) I have written columns about that 5-5-3 agreement. So have all international commentators It was deemed as binding as the Declaration of Independence. Now it sacrcely is remembered, except by historians.

REVERSE.

President Roosevelt, to be sure, has to consider present conditions.

Maybe preparation for war is a defense against it.

However, it wasn't so regarded 10 years ago.

UNPRODUCTIVE WORK.

One pro-preparation count is that warship-building and munitions-manufacture makes work—absorbs unemployment.

On the face of it; it is boondoggling.

It is unproductive — is worse, indeed, than boondoggling. Raking leaves is harmless, anyway. Munition manufacture is internationally explosive.

It is the "preparedness" issue, of the Wilsonian period, over again.

We know what that led to.

What Men Believe About Women.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SILLY as are the things that women believe about men, they aren't at patch on the things that men believe about women. In spite of all their playing and palavering together, males and females still regard each other with tongue-in-cheek and ace-up-sleeve.

No man understands women and frankly says so. Whereat women are greatly flattered. They needn't be. It's no compliment. The real reason why men do not understand women is not because women are boojum . . . but because men do not think they are worth understanding.

Any man could understand any woman if he judged her by the tests and standards which he would apply to any man of like caliber. For, fundamentally, there isn't a particle of difference between male intelligence and female intelligence. There has been tremendous difference between male and female training and environment, but, given an even break the average woman can qualify with the average man. But it is abhorrent to male egotism to admit this. He will not acknowledge that the lady shares his brand of humanity. He insists that she's different. And he has devised a most clever sales talk to put the idea over.

"Women are smart," say men, "but they aren't smart the way men are smart. They don't really think things out—for truth is they haven't regular brains to think with. But they have a queer, mysterious function in its place—they have intuition.

"Intuition doesn't really amount to much—but now and then it pulls some awful fast stuff," continues the complacent male, "and that's where a fellow gets fooled. He thinks a woman MUST be using her brains to pull stuff like that. But how can a woman use her brains when she hasn't any to use? Nope, you can't expect a woman to be intelligent like a man. But she sure is mysterious."

All of which, you might imagine, would make the Dear Little Woman see red. But not so. Only one sentence in this sales argument registers with her—namely, that she is "mysterious." And this tickles her so much that she's willing to let the Big Boy get by with murder if he'll just keep up the Feminine Mystery fantasy.

For, of course, it is only a fantasy. Women aren't a particle more mysterious than men. Their boasted "intuition" and "feminine instinct" are reasoning processes just as man's balanced judgment is reasoning process. But woman, unhampered by thousands of years of conventional training, leaps at conclusions, whereas man lumbers along in approved ruts. But she blunders quite as often in her leaps as he does in his lumbering.

Feminine mystery—only a fantasy—but what a comfortable fantasy for both sexes. It allows the male to park the female in the back alley and go his way unhindered, with her own enthusiastic approval. And it allows the female to acquire a lot of fancy merit without working for it. Which, if you're that kind of a man or that kind of a woman, is certainly a jake arrangement.

This same trick technique is used in dealing with other feminine attributes. Traditionally women are purer, more honest, more sensitive, more timid and generally nicer than men. Not a word of it is true! Women are imbued with exactly the same moral and emotional qualities and face exactly the same temptations as men. But how complimentary to the ladies, if the gentlemen deny this . . . AND HOW DOGGONED CONVENIENT FOR THE GENTLEMEN!

Keeping Step

Considering Anti-Monopoly Legislation.

—By LESLIE EICHEL

CURBING monopolies will not be the simple thing it looked to be. The fight with the president's ranks—and within the Republicans' ranks as well—is broadening.

The New York Times, in what seems an inspired article or a "trial balloon," says:

"Some of those with whom President Roosevelt has discussed the monopoly questions recently have gained the impression that he would correct certain business 'abuses' by specific legislation defining the practices rather than by vesting in the government discretionary authority to accomplish the objective. . . ."

Visitors "have been impressed by his apparent preference for 'self-executing laws', in dealing with monopoly, as distinguished from congressional grants of discretionary power to the executive branch."

The Times article continues: "If the president has decided on this approach, some of his economic advisers feel that he has taken a long step toward inspiring 'business confidence' in the future. . . ."

It seems evident, therefore, that the president has turned away from the advice of Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, for a new form of an NRA, and has heeded the cry of the liberals, headed by Robert H Jackson, solicitor general, and new administration spokesman for the liberals.

WHAT BILL?

What bill providing "self executing" laws will the president back?

He has been conferring with Senators Borah and O'Mahoney over their bill to require federal licensing of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce. He has given the impression that he favors this bill.

Yet here is the United States Chamber of Commerce denouncing the bill.

Merely a few months ago, the same chamber was applauding Senator O'Mahoney for being one of the Democrats to fight the president's supreme court enlargement bill.

Liberal members of congress have no illusions—either laws conferring the power of regulation on the executive branch of the government or a bill providing for a "self-executing" law will be fought by Big Business.

BILL EXPLAINED

Just what would the Borah-O'Mahoney licensing bill do?

Here is the explanation by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, himself:

"This bill does not invade state rights. It merely defines the powers and responsibilities of corporations engaging in interstate and foreign commerce.

"It does not apply to individuals. It deals with corporations.

"It does not create discretionary power in a bureaucracy. It merely establishes the rules of the game for corporations and provides an umpire in the federal trade commission.

"It does not attempt to fix prices. It is based upon the philosophy of the preservation of competition.

"It does not give any government bureaucracy the power to allow or prohibit trade practices. It undertakes only to prohibit those unfair trade practices which have been so defined by the courts.

"It does not limit the independent managerial powers of those in control of corporations. It only protects the investor from abuses by unscrupulous management by making all corporation officials trustees for their stockholders.

"It does not invoke any new or rigid idea of government regulation. It is merely the restatement of a principle which has already been enunciated by Presidents Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft and Woodrow Wilson."

LICENSES NEEDED

Senator O'Mahoney points out that the bill would require all corporations engaged in interstate commerce to take out federal licenses which would stipulate that the corporations must operate under specifications of the bill.

"This bill has three essential requirements.

"First, it would protect the rights of labor—that is, the individual rights. It would recognize collective bargaining. It would deprive corporations of the power to employ child labor. It would require equal pay for equal work for men and women.

"Second, it would compel fair trade practices. It would prohibit unfair practices as denominated by the courts.

"Third, it would deprive corporations of the power to commit financial abuses that have caused this depression. It would prohibit the issuance of stock with non-voting rights. It would require that every share of stock should have voting power It would require that the stockholders' meeting be held at the principal place of business of the corporation and not way up in the Maine woods or some such place.

"Then it would provide that the federal trade commission be directed to call a national economic council in which the business men, the employes and the consumers would be represented and at which recommendations for regulations of all industry would be made. These would then come to congress for action.

"There is not a single line of delegated power in the bill. Every requirement is explicitly written into it so all will know what is required."

CONTROL IN FEW

O'Mahoney adds that in 1932 income tax returns were filed by 392,000 corporations representing $280,000,000,000. In these corporations, he said, 53 per cent of the total assets were controlled by 618 corporations.

Trade conditions, the senator says, have made interstate trade the greatest power in the country. He cites various sections of the constitution to show that its framers intended that matters affecting the nation as a whole should be controlled by the federal government

"No-Passing" Zones

A safety technique which some states are now enacting into law is one which prescribes certain "no passing zones." The new Indiana statute which provides for establishing these zones is typical. It stipulates that wherever the driver's vision is obstructed by a curve, hill or other obstruction for a distance of 750 yards or less ahead, the highway commission may mark with orange or yellow paint a stripe at the center line of the road and designate it as a "no-passing zone."

The value of this sort of law is that it formalizes one of the most vital and important rules of safe driving—not to pass other cars going in the same direction on hills or curves or at other points where a third car may unexpectedly appear from the opposite direction. Practically all states have marked such danger spots, and some of them have had laws covering such situations in general.—Columbus Dispatch.

Drug Store Started Long Ago With Primitive Forerunner

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

DO YOU SEE that man over there in the white coat, coming to the door of his shop to direct that woman to the street car that goes to the postoffice? He looks spruce and clean and modern, but he has been doing business, there or somewhere in some capacity, for ten thousand years. He is the corner drug store.

He was a fixture in the life of the world long before there was a court of law. Before there was a president or a constitution or a king or a government, even. Because they tell that the most primitive race on earth, who live in a social system that is not even tribal, have a special tree, the leaves of which are used to put on wounds to make them heal. In Exodus is written, "The Lord spake unto Moses: Thou shalt make it in an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compounded after the art of the apothecary." And if that wasn't the corner drug store, what was?

The druggist at the corner drug store used to go out and gather his own herbs In fact, for many years the best drug stores were associated with monasteries, and the monks grew in their gardens the plants which they used for drugs and cosmetics, so the cosmetic counter of a modern drug store is a logical part of that institution.

Employs World Resources.

The pharmacist of today does not collect his own samples personally—he has the resources of the world at his disposal through the organization of the large manufacturing drug companies—but he has other responsibilities and is trained better than any of the pharmacists of the old days. It is well that he has this responsibility and training because you have to depend on him just as much as you do on the doctor, for an honest product. He shares the responsibility with the physician of seeing that you get exactly what the doctor ordered with no substitution; that the ingredients of a prescription are carefully measured and compounded, and that the prescription is a matter of record so that it can be referred to later.

He is a chemist as well as a purveyor, and the "q. s." which the doctor sometimes slips into his prescription allows him to put "quantity sufficient" of sugar or peppermint oil or spice of some kind to make an otherwise disagreeable medicine palatable.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"To Smell of the Lamp".

One of the earliest of historic humans to feel the futility, the dead-weight and distraction of possessions was Demosthenes—great Greek who passed up the luxuries to be had for his asking and who chose the plain seclusion of an underground cave lit by oil!

In this subterranean hideaway, Time's outstanding orator passed much of his leisure: and in its uninviting privacy, he composed the forensic masterpieces which swayed his contemporaries to his will.

The orations of Demosthenes were not, of course, pleasing to all. Many, jealous of his eloquence, opposed his views; especially the politician, Pytheas, who, however, finding no effective loophole in the merit of Demosthenes' telling words through which to drive a shaft, criticized his utterances in language which was perpetuated by Plutarch:

"They smell of the lamp!"

The implication, which the line connotes to this very day, is that they were not the spontaneous, fiery, sincere sentiments they seemed; but rather were the product of artful, labored and prolonged effort.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

A RUNNER-UP for the late George Horace Lorimer's aversion to New York is Karl Bickel, ex-newspaperman. Bickel is among the few high-powered executives to call it a day while on the hither side of 50. He saved his kudos while the going was good and now coasts.

His big job was president of the United Press. After settling his affairs he set out for Sarasota, Fla., where he built a hacienda, surrounded himself with a kennel of favorite dogs and now comes to New York only when he has to take a liner for Europe.

Irvin Cobb, so long a part of the local scene, went to Hollywood to fill a six week contract. That was four years ago. He has been back but once and was then the proverbial fish out of water. Both his city apartment on Park avenue and country place at Easthampton are on the market.

No one perhaps was a more dyed-in-the-wool Broadwayite than Mason Peters, wit and newspaperman. He formed a sudden dislike for the town and quit it about six years ago. A few months ago he returned for a month's visit but left the metropolis flat in 48 hours.

New York has a Shanghai Refugee Club, composed of those who had to flee the war-stricken Chinese city without possessions. There are several hundred here trying to get a new hold on life—a fresh start. There was a strict order: "No dogs or animals allowed in evacuation." Thus it was a number refused to go and many paid for such understandable devotion with their lives. And most of the deserted dogs left behind were slain.

It's an odd assortment of types and certainly the most bewhiskered that comprises the audience at the Cameo, a movie a hop skip off Broadway in 42nd street. It exploits chiefly the Russian film and news pictures stressing the progress of the Soviet. Many jabber away in native tongue. The women are the shawled and shrinking prototypes of the Ghetto doorways. All are undemonstrative, seldom laughing, applauding or booing.

Among most popular of the deluxe liner pursers is the satiny Henry Villar, of the Normandie, who, it is reported, may retire in a season or so. He began pursing on the Paris, then went to the Ile de France and on to his present post Once a marine lawyer at Havre, he was pressed into service during an emergency and proved so affable and capable he was induced to quit avocating and make sailing a career. He speaks seven languages but his chief charm is in his exquisite manners. He seems absolutely crushed with sympathy when nasty weather comes and has a way of bending over a lady's hand for a bee's wing kiss that makes her feel the ship is hers.

The seasoned voyager, incidentally, is not always the jaunty sailor, in the sense of freedom from mal de mer Frabier Hunt becomes nauseated going up a gang plank and remains in bed unable to raise his head until he reaches the other side. I have been in two fierce Atlantic gales and in both instances the captains confessed they had their uneasy moments. The most astonishing sailor ever encountered was a New York woman who professed to have no appetite on shore but was wolf hungry when a ship got out of sight of land. She devoured large bowls of onion soup for breakfast, participating in all the deck snacks and three whopping meals a day. In a most violent storm she never had the tiniest touch of squeamishness.

No illnesses — and I've had some honeys—bring on such an all gone feeling as sea sickness. Nor is any recovery so complete and rapid. I once actually considered ordering an ambulance to trundle me to Paris when within a few hours to Havre and it is no exaggeration that ten minutes after I landed I was doing a jig under the train sheds. And after several wan days of splitting a grape with my wife for food, we each tore into a Chateaubriand with trimmings for breakfast on the boat train.
